Bennett girds up for tough convention

Premier Bill Bennett is meeting in Vancouver today with a restless caucus in what observers feel is a bid to emphasize his leadership and ensure that the dirty tricks affair does not dominate the Social Credit convention which kicks off Thursday.

While Bennett wants to try to keep the ever-widening dirty tricks scandal from overshadowing the three-day annual meeting, his efforts may be in vain.

The premier says he will present a resolution to the convention "instructing the executive to develop an ethics committee on standards to be brought back to the convention in 1980 for approval."

But the question remains: Will this be enough to stifle the growing scandal and quieten the increasing demand within and outside the party that everyone responsible be identified and held accountable?

In past years, the caucus has met after the three-day convention to discuss any resolutions passed and make plans.

But sources say the premier wants to remind the caucus who is boss and settle any question of his leadership before it spills onto the convention floor.

The convention will be a soul-searching session and some insiders say it may ultimately determine the party's future as a viable, political force in B.C.

Some 1,500 Socreds who once prided themselves on their party's quiet efficiency and its businesslike organization and strategy, find themselves members of an organization which appears to be in disarray.

They face three days of earnest debate — a debate which they hope will create a new, squeaky-clean image to present to the voters of B.C.

The party has been rocked in recent weeks by the dirty tricks affair — an ongoing scandal involving forged letters-to-the-editor which may yet end up in the courts.

His leadership — or his lack of it in delegating responsibility to root out why lettergate occurred and who was responsible — will be called into question at the convention.

Bennett must also deal with a caucus which is wondering when a cabinet shuffle, now some five months overdue, will take place.

The caucus must tackle the case of Ellen MacKay, a researcher involved with former chief researcher Jack Kelly, in the dirty tricks campaign.

Kelly quit and MacKay's status is up in the air. Both have retained a lawyer and Kelly at least has said he is considering legal action against the party for wrongful dismissal.

Party critics claim that Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy and other cabinet ministers did little or nothing to resolve the scandal while the premier was away.

And this has fueled criticism that Bennett is attempting to run the party as a one-man show.

Bennett was initially accused of trying to seize complete control of the party when he appointed Hugh Harris, his friend and personal campaign manager, as party executive director.

John Gilchrist, the party provincial director ousted in the move, charged that the party was being turned into a branch plant of the premier's office, but later withdrew the remark.

The convention also will offer party faithful their first chance to question the government about the near-disastrous May 10 provincial election.

Joe Who stew

It arrived on Parliament Hill on the label of a large model of a can of Clark beans, the latest annual Halloween prank by Carleton University architecture students.

"Joe's own recipe for Campaign Stew," read the label.

"Crack open Petro-Can and separate profit from deficit. Discard profit. Add McTeer and Davis and stir vigorously. Mix in sauteed embassy and bring to a boil. Skim off 60,000 civil servants. Strain out Crown corporations and simmer at inflation rate of 16 per cent.

"Serves 9-10 Provinces and 2 Territories."

The large can, 2½ metres high and two metres in diameter, was topped by red and orange balloons resembling the beans in pork and beans.

The stew can didn't stay long on Parliament Hill. Under orders from the Mounties, the students loaded it back on a donated truck and drove downtown.

$18M a day for Alta. oil?

B.C. would have to pay Alberta $18 million a day for crude oil if the oil-producing province unilaterally hiked prices to world levels, according to B.C. Energy Minister James Hewitt.

Negotiations between Alberta and the federal government for a new oil-pricing system have bogged down, and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed warned this week that he would be prepared to raise prices unilaterally and refuse to sell Alberta oil for less.

Provinces unwilling to pay the new prices could "shop elsewhere," he said.

(The Economic Council of Canada gave its stamp of approval today to increasing domestic oil by $4 a barrel a year for at least the next five years.)

(The increase was one of 12 major recommendations in the council's 1979 annual review entitled Two Cheers for the Eighties. See page 28 for ECC report).

Hewitt said Tuesday the threat by Lougheed was the result of frustration at being unable to obtain a federal price agreement.

"This could cost other oil-consuming provinces a great deal of money in the near future," he said.

Ministry economist Ted France said an increase to world-level oil prices by Alberta would mean an increase of $10 a barrel, bringing B.C.'s oil costs close to $18 million a day, or $6.57 billion a year.

"B.C. buys about 120,000 barrels of oil a day from Alberta at $13.75 a barrel," France said. "Shipping and administrative costs bring this up to around $14.25 by the time it reaches the province."

He said Alberta oil costs the province about $650 million a year and the kind of increase threatened by Lougheed would take "a sizeable bite" out of provincial revenues.

"At one point, B.C. oil fields were producing 70,000 barrels of oil a day, but production is down to 40,000 barrels a day and dropping as the supply nears depletion," France said.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Joe Clark Tuesday assured the Commons the federal government will have the last word on domestic oil prices, but Lougheed warned against that last word ignoring input from Alberta.

Lougheed told the legislature his earlier statement that Alberta might have to unilaterally set the price of domestic oil was meant as a firm indication his province won't accept the federal government arriving at a price on its own.

Clark said he still believes a federal-provincial agreement will be reached.

Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau asked Clark in the Commons whether he would ensure that Western oil will be available to all Canadians in light of Lougheed's statement.

Clark said the federal government has powers under the constitution to enforce an agreement and can also use sections of the Petroleum Administration Act, a bill passed in 1975.

But the prime minister said he doubts the federal government will have to impose a settlement under its special constitutional powers.

Housewives may get cash

BERN (Reuter) — Women in Switzerland would get the right to cash payments from their husbands for staying at home as housewives under a proposed law announced by the government on Tuesday.

The money would be in addition to housekeeping expenses and would have to be the same as the husband has for his own pleasures, said a spokesman for the ministry of justice and police.

A man who stayed at home would be able to claim similar payments under the proposed law, which is to go before parliament next year.

The planned revisions to Swiss matrimonial law, which has been in effect since 1912 and favors men, would allow a woman for the first time to take a job without her husband's permission.

Current law names the husband as the head of he household, gives him the power to decide where the couple lives and the right to refuse to allow his wife to sign contracts for anything beyond daily housekeeping needs, the spokesman said.

Under the revised law, couples would decide together where they live. Both partners would have equal rights to sign contracts.

Housekeeping would become a joint reponsibility and the man or woman who stayed at home to do it would have "the right to an equitable amount of money which he or she can dispose of freely."

Election call shocks Grits

OTTAWA (CP) — Some Liberal MPs reacted with shock and disbelief today when told that Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau has had a change of heart and now is ready to defeat the minority Progressive Conservative government and face the nation in another election.

"When did he say that?" former finance minister Jean Chretien asked in a voice that seemed marked with incredulity.

Hal Herbert, MP for the Montreal area riding of Vaudreuil, said the country is not ready for an election.

"I'm worried about going too fast," Herbert told reporters on entering the weekly meeting of Liberal MPs.

Another top Liberal, who asked to remain anonymous, and a spokesman for Prime Minister Clark both said a survey of Liberal MPs would likely show most are oppposed to a defeat of the minority government so soon after the May 22 election.

Addressing a Liberal association meeting Tuesday, Trudeau said his party will try to defeat the minority government the first chance it gets.

"Let's throw the government out as soon as we can and get back in again," Trudeau told 300 party supporters.

The statement indicated a shift in attitude by the former prime minister. Until then, he had been saying all opposition parties should give the Tories a chance to govern.

"We're ready to go to the mat with Trudeau any day, any time," Finance Ministers Crosbie told reporters in response to Trudeau's election statement.

"He'd be gone. He'd be slaughtered. He'd be vanished. He's through. He's finished. He just doesn't realize it.

"I don't think he means it in any event," Crosbie added.

Wild winds whip snow as Colorado clobbered

Times News Services

Savage winds piled 12-foot snowdrifts on the high-country roads of eastern Colorado today, leaving hundreds of people huddled in snow-mired trucks and buses, awaiting rescue by emergency teams on snowplows.

The massive storm system — which buried a broad area from Nebraska to Colorado in deep snow and sent tornadoes and deadly winds raging to the south of the snow — left a path of personal tragedy as at least eight people were killed and two were reported missing.

It was a cruel prelude to winter through portions of the central and southern plains of the United States.

In addition to the dead and stranded, the storm toll included knocked-out power lines.

Blizzard warnings were in effect early today across western Kansas and west-central Nebraska, and travellers advisories were posted for the Texas Panhandle, northeastern New Mexico and the mountains and foothills of Colorado, the National Weather Service said.

Two persons were killed Tuesday when a freak tornado spawned by the storm smashed a mobil home in a rural community near Ardmore, Okla.

Six other persons died in traffic accidents, including a man and woman struck by a car when they stopped to help a vehicle stalled in a snow-filled ditch in the Texas Panhandle.

A Continental Trailways bus en route from Amarillo, Tex., to Denver was stranded in southeastern Colorado, and plows trying to reach it drove against winds of 150 kilometres an hour.

$1 billion coal pact

A Taiwan government agency has tentatively agreed to buy coal from a B.C. company in a $1-billion, 25-year deal which will create an $80-million mine near Prince George and 600 jobs in central B.C.

The agreement between Norco Resources Ltd. and Taiwan Power Co. was signed earlier this month as Premier Bill Bennett toured the Far East looking for markets for B.C.'s natural resources.

Today's announcement of the deal, came as Economic Development Minister Don Phillips prepares to lead a trade delegation to the People's Republic of China.

Mexico DC-10 crash kills 63

MEXICO CITY (CP) — A Western Airlines DC-10 jetliner inbound from Los Angeles with at least 88 persons aboard crashed in fog on a closed-for-repairs runway at the Mexico City airport today, killing at least 63 persons, officials said.

The U.S. consul said 19 survivors, all injured, were taken to three hospitals. One report said a Canadian identified only as D.J., 37, was among the survivors. The fate of the others aboard the plane was not immediately known. Nor was it known how many U.S. citizens were aboard. Most of the passengers were believed Mexicans.

A Mexican aviation official said the plane touched down at Benito Juarez International Airport on a runway that was closed for repairs, struck a parked truck and killed its driver, and plowed into two buildings.

In New York, experts said it was too soon to tell whether the crash of the DC-10 would cause additional problems for the manufacturer of the aircraft, McDonnell Douglas Corp. The company has been in the process of recovering from a 37-day grounding of its DC-10s after an American Airlines plane crashed last May 25 at Chicago's O'Hare Airport, killing 273 persons, the worst aviation disaster in North American history.

Witnesses said the DC-10's right wing hit one airport building and then the plane crashed against a new building under construction, part of which is used by the Mexican post office, and the roof caved in.

An airport control tower employee said he understood the plane's captain, Charles Gilbert, survived.

In Los Angeles, the airline said the plane had 88 persons aboard, 77 passengers and 11 crew members. It said earlier reports of two more aboard stemmed from the fact that two flight attendants were listed both as passengers and as crew members.

Luis Pasquel, vice-president for Western in Mexico, said the plane was approaching the airport over Lake Texcoco when it crashed within airport boundaries.

The crash occurred at 5:40 a.m. local time. Airport employees said there was "fairly heavy fog" at the time.

Mexico city airport is considered by pilots "a difficult" airport to approach because of nearby mountains and occasional poor visibility. It is surrounded by residential areas.

Cass bows out

Saanich aldermanic candidate Ian Cass has dropped out of the municipal election because of a possible conflict of interest.

Cass, a former alderman, filed nomination papers Monday but said he was withdrawing from the 12-candidate field because his job as local vice-president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada might be seen as a conflict of interest.

Bureaucrats smother fire upgrading bid

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The owners of at least two big apartment buildings in Victoria are prepared to go ahead with all the safety upgrading demanded by the fire department but city hall has refused to issue the proper permits.

City council's fire prevention committee meets in secret Thursday morning to try to unscramble a bureaucratic tangle between the fire department and the city's building inspectors which has delayed the installation of smoke detectors and other equipment.

It's a startling reversal of what happened earlier this year when adverse publicity descended on some commercial property owners accused of dragging their feet. Now it's the city which is stalling.

The owners of two buildings — the Beacon Towers at 240 Douglas and Seaview Towers at 450 Dallas — are angry because they made a start on the improvements earlier this year but now are held up because they can't get a permit.

The dispute appears to centre around the need for heat detectors to be installed. In August, council's fire prevention committee deleted this requirement from the list of improvements demanded by Fire Chief Eric Simmons, after some owners (not the Beacon Towers) protested the expense.

Heat detectors in each apartment and hallway outside are definitely required by the National Building Code, according to a fire department source.

Thursday's meeting will be held behind closed doors because the city fears possible court action, depending on what decision it makes. If it again decides against heat detectors, presumably the city could be held liable by an owner or tenant in case of a fire.

Harold McInnes, manager of the eight-storey Beacon Towers with 60 suites, outlined the runaround he got while the owners attempted to comply with the fire department's orders.

In May, his building was posted by the department, stating that smoke detectors, heat detectors and emergency lighting had to be added. The owner of the building, retired Calgary resident Fred King, was willing to go ahead with all the work at an estimated cost of $70,000.

McInnes said plans were drafted and initially approved. But the electrical draftsman couldn't get the revised version through in early September after the council committee deleted the heat detectors. In a letter of Sept. 9 he asked for a permit, but there has still been no reply.

McInnes said he finally told Glen Valley Electric Ltd. to go ahead hoping the permit would come through, since the fire department set a deadline of Nov. 30 after which the owner could be taken to court.

The electricians worked about two weeks, but were pulled off when the permit still wasn't issued.

Other buildings facing the same problem and the same Nov. 30 deadline imposed by Simmons' office are Princess Patricia Apartments, 701 Esquimalt Road; Lord Simcoe apartments, 450 Simcoe; Bickerton Court, 250 Douglas; Goodacre Towers, 350 and 360 Douglas, Regent Towers, 415 Michigan; Charter House, 435 Michigan.

PCB probe demanded

Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson has demanded that Health Minister Bob McClelland launch a provincial inquiry into health hazards from polychlorinated biphenol (PCB), particularly for pregnant women.

Hanson said the matter is one of great urgency.

The NDP MLA said an inquiry is needed in view of recent disclosures that PCB contamination is widespread in the B.C. poultry industry and tests have indicated up to 27 parts per million in some pheasants. (See stories on page 58).

$5M sewer plan wins approval

Saanich public works committee Tuesday approved a $5 million, five-year sewer extension to Cordova Bay.

Work will start as soon as the project is approved by council, says public works chairman Ald. Fred Severson.

Engineers will design a gravity collection system and disposal to the trunk sewer line recommended in a study by Willis, Cunliffe, Tait and Co., Ltd.

Health hazards from septic tank seepage will be cleared up and one of Saanich's finest beaches restored, Severson said.

Severson estimates it will take a year or two after installation to clear the beaches.

The sewer extension will have a capacity for 7,000 people, almost double the present population of the area.

The provincial government will pick up 75 per cent of the cost but the extension will mean an additional $8 charge to Saanich homeowners already hooked up to the sewer line.

Ferry pact vote today

Some 2,700 members of the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers are voting today on a tentative contract agreement with the B.C. Ferry Corporation.

The ratification vote is the result of pressure on the union executive from the union membership.

The executive had initially refused to hold the vote until the corporation reinstated Bob Peacock, a union member fired for participating in walkouts at Horseshoe Bay last month.

Union president Shirley Mathieson said if the membership accepts the management offer of eight per cent pay increases in each year of a two-year agreement, union officers will sign the contract.

No abuse of retarded

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Surrey School Board has been cleared of wrongdoing in the practice of withholding food from retarded students after an investigation by the B.C. human resources ministry.

The investigation has concluded that officials at Simon Cunningham School in the Vancouver suburb did nothing that could be regarded as child abuse or neglect.

The ministry ordered the investiation after a sister of a retarded student at the school complained that teachers were withholding lunches and snacks as a form of punishment.

The practice was halted even though school officials defended it as an acceptable form of training.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy has said her ministry does not approve of the practice, but says treats are often used in teaching children with special needs.

The situation at the school was the result of a breakdown in communication between parents and the school administration, Mrs. McCarthy said.

Wendy ordered to aid elderly

KING
. . . brown book closed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city prostitute whose little brown book is said to contain the names of socially-prominent men was sentenced Tuesday to do 200 hours community work, preferably among senior citizens.

Wendy King, 31, also was fined $1,500 and placed on nine months probation. She had pleaded guilty Oct. 22 to keeping a bawdy house in a West End apartment between May and September, 1978.

King was a central figure in a prostitution scandal that has left many unanswered questions.

The scandal, termed the judges affair, began last November when police tapped King's telephone and subsequently seized the notebook. One month later, John Farris resigned as chief justice of British Columbia, citing allegations that hampered his work.

Judge Darrell Jones, in sentencing King Tuesday, said transcripts of telephone taps indicated King provided her clients not only with sexual services, but "filled an emotional vacuum" for some. He called that a "pathetic element of the case."

Judge Jones, who could have given King two years in prison, noted that society has more tolerant attitudes these days.

"We no longer stone prostitutes to death or cut off their hair," he said.

Earlier, Judge Jones ordered the court clerk to seal the tape transcripts and notebooks and forbid public inspection of them.

The notebook contained 800 names, some from what the judge termed "the highest level of our society." He said sealing the evidence would avoid embarrassment to persons named in the notebook or identified in the wiretap tapes.

"Their very nature indicates that they should be treated with some discretion," Judge Jones had said. "It does not serve any useful purpose to make them public."

McCarthy aware of deaths

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Tuesday she is not surprised by a report which shows a dramatic increase in the number of violence-related deaths among children in B.C.

Mrs. McCarthy said her ministry has been aware for some time that more children are dying by suicides, homicides and accidents.

Mrs. McCarthy said a new program in which family support workers help to mend broken families is one way her ministry is attempting to address the problem.

Housing, farms bad mix?

DELTA (CP) — Farmers who own 543 acres of land that council wants to remove from the agricultural land reserve say farming is incompatible with surrounding residential development in the area.

Council approved a motion Monday to ask Environment Minister Rafe Mair, who also is land use committee chairman, to release the land near Boundary Bay for residential use.

"By removing the land from the reserve we'd eliminate the rural-urban interface problem," said George Spetifore who owns 300 acres of the land. "Aerial spraying and the smell caused by spreading manure don't go along with residential development."

Spetifore, whose family has owned the land for 45 years, said a recent soil analysis showed the land to be of poor to medium quality for agricultural purposes, largely because of its high salt content.

Moving seen RCMP hazard

Frequent transfers are occupational hazards for Mounties and top RCMP officers say they have no sympathy for members who refuse to move.

Superintendent Ian Fisher said that despite high costs of moving, transfers are for the good of the organization and the individual. Once made, he adds, orders to move must be obeyed.

Cpl. Al Thiel was bounced from the force last week when he refused to move to Williams Lake in the central Interior from his post in McBride.

Thiel, who has spent 14 of his 36 years with the RCMP, has gone to the federal courts to press for an internal hearing of his case. He has the moral support of many in the community of 600.

Fisher said applicants to the force are fully aware that they will be moved around. Members usually are transferred every two or three years.

"Mobility is part of the job requirement," he said Tuesday. "And there is always a reason. We don't tranfer just for the sake of transferring.

"If a member doesn't follow what is good for the organization, well I'm sorry, but that's it."

Objections to moves have increased since grievance procedures were written into RCMP policy several years ago. Escalating costs of mortgages have contributed to that trend.

Thiel's case is not the first in which a member has taken on the force, but a favorable legal judgment in his favor would set a precedent the RCMP would like to avoid.

"If Thiel wins, just think of all the other members who would refuse to move," said McBride resident Don Reed.

RCMP officials in Ottawa denied that Thiel was transferred because his superiors were worried about his grass-roots policing.

Uranium sites ordered bared

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. health ministry and D.G. Leighton and Associates, a mining consulting firm, were ordered Tuesday to divulge the locations of 30 new uranium deposits in B.C.

The Royal Commission into Uranium Mining has given the ministry and the consulting firm until noon Nov. 6 to hand over all documents relating to the locations.

When the commission learned of the deposits at its Oct. 19 hearings it was told one deposit was near Summerland, but it has no idea where the others are, said press officer Owen Grant.

Environmental groups attending the hearing said the cloud of secrecy surrounding the new deposits was not only worrying people, it was affecting property values as well, especially in Summerland.

Pickets shut mill

The action followed picketing by women over the firing.

Last week wives of Tahsis employees, singing the country-and-western tune, Stand By Your Man, shut down the company's operation here.

The seven wives were protesting the firing of Sam Rogers, camp secretary and community leader, and their husbands refused to cross the picket lines.

Towboat pact veto is urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Leaders of a union representing about 600 coastal towboat deckhands, cooks and oilers are recommending rejection of a two-year contract offer from the Council of Marine Carriers.

Tom McGrath of the seamen's local of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers said Tuesday the wages offered deckhands "are far short of those that were agreed to in the forest and pulp industry." Details of the offer were not released.

Nation's eyes shift

The premier of Alberta wasn't kidding last week when he told 900 of his party faithful in Edmonton that they should batten down the hatches in preparation for a fight over oil prices. Peter Lougheed made good the warning this week when he informed the Vancouver Board of Trade that Alberta was ready to raise the price of its oil unilaterally to world levels if a satisfactory agreement wasn't forthcoming with Ottawa.

With chilling bluntness, Lougheed let Canadians know loud and clear that if they weren't willing to support Alberta's oil price demands, they could shop elsewhere for their oil.

In making this declaration, the premier has passed the ball into Ottawa's court.

Jokes about the blue-eyed Arabs from Alberta are no longer funny. Whatever remanents remain of the spirit of compromise and conciliation that has held the federation of Canada together seem to be evaporating quickly. Lougheed has as much as told Prime Minister Clark that if Ottawa dares to unilaterally to set the price of domestic oil too far below Alberta's expectations, then indeed, there would be "stresses and strains" on confederation.

It is difficult to accept the view that Lougheed was merely grandstanding and that the rest of the country would see the Albertans as merely tough bargainers. Threatening to shut off oil supplies to the other provinces sounds more like blackmail.

Opposition critics in Ottawa, outraged with the premier's stand, complain that Alberta was bargaining in public and doing a disservice to the country. "It's shocking to hear a premier supposedly in favor of Canada staying together talking like this," said Liberal finance critic Herb Gray.

On the contrary, Lougheed has probably done Canadians a service. The man who leads the only oil-rich province has shaken the country into realizing just how far he is prepared to go. The result is that the fabric of the nation now depends on the cloth from which Joe Clark is cut.

The prime minister has neatly ducked becoming directly involved in Quebec's drive for sovereignty, saying that because he isn't a resident of Quebec he will keep a low profile in the referendum campaign. In the matter of Alberta's resource sovereignty, no such excuses are acceptable.

His attempts to reach an agreement between Ontario and Alberta on how quickly domestic oil should move towards world levels are staggering. The spirit of compromise through negotiation on the oil issue is clearly failing if Lougheed and Clark are willing to threaten each other with unilateral action.

Lougheed has the interests of Alberta at heart while Clark must take into account the well being of the nation. No one province can be left in a position to undermine the economy of the rest of Canada. Clark must show the people of Alberta and the other provinces that his leadership in this confrontation, is worth following.

Fending off

For many reading the evening newspaper tonight, they will be interrupted with the cry of little witches and goblins clamoring at the front door. And as is tradition on Halloween, an offering of goodies (preferable something that has some food value) will entice them to go away happy.

The ritual is steeped in custom that has been passed up through the ages in various forms, depending on the county. For centuries there has been a belief that the spirits are abroad on Halloween. It was thought that the spirits of the dead returned to their former homes and gifts of food were prepared and left for them to take away. Bonfires were lit to scare away evil spirits that might be present.

It would be nice if the poverty and pain suffered by millions around the world could be discouraged as easily. The little UNICEF boxes that will be carried by many younsters are designed to alleviate a bit of that suffering.

So when you fend off the spirits by dropping goodies in their caches — help to fend off a little misery with a few coppers in their boxes.

Local winner

From the their-gain-is-our-loss department: a quick note of congratulations today to a Victorian moving on to bigger and better things in Vancouver.

John Post, a former inspector with the Saanich police department and the current head of the criminal justice program at Camosun College, has been appointed the new director of the B.C. Police Academy.

In his new job, Post will be responsible for the training offered recruits from all the municipal police forces in the province.

It seems a natural move for Post. He has long had an interest in combining the fields of education with police work, and was one of the founders of the national police educators' conference.

All the best from his many friends in Victoria as he takes on this challenging task.

"... all she did was roll around in the mud, put a stamp on her forehead, and go around as a dirty letter."

Kennedy makes it official

WASHINGTON — After a long, calculated and highly-publicized flirtation with the idea, Sen. Edward Kennedy finally made it official on Monday: He will challenge Jimmy Carter for the presidency next year.

There was no hoopla, brass band, champagne or impassioned speech. The senator wasn't even there, in fact, as brother-in-law and campaign manager Stephen Smith formally announced the creation of a campaign committee to begin the wooing of 3,300 Democratic delegates across the country.

Kennedy was on Capitol Hill taking care of his senatorial business. He will make his "hat-in-the-ring" speech in Boston on Nov. 7.

Still, Monday's affair drew a huge crowd of reporters who have been chronicling the senator's political coyness since last summer, when he first began acting and talking like a potential candidate.

Third of family

In a converted Cadillac showroom about a mile from the White House, under a large banner reading "Kennedy for '80," Smith said that a campaign committee had filed papers with the Federal Election Commission earlier in the day.

This means that the Kennedy forces across the country can now legally start raising money and lining up support for their man, the third Kennedy to run for president in two decades.

Possibly because of complex U.S. election laws, Kennedy has been staging a kind of "shadow" campaign since early fall, speaking out on national issues and occasionally attacking Carter.

As a consequence, draft-Kennedy committees sprang up in 36 states (as well as among the American community in Paris, France) and raised more than $500,000 in the hope that the senator would eventually come out of the closet.

Since they were technically "independent" groups, disavowed by the senator, they could accept $5,000 per individual, compared to a legal limit of $1,000 for an announced candidate.

With yesterday's announcement, all these committees must cease operations and the FEC must decide how much of the accumulated cash, if any, may be transferred to the Kennedy campaign coffers.

Most of these draft committee volunteers are expected to join his official campaign.

Kennedy, whom polls say has a 2-to-1 lead over Carter among Democratic and independent voters, will run in every one of the 35 presidential primaries next year.

Last week, Kennedy staged two important coups in his bid for the presidency. A top Carter fundraiser, Morris Dees, came over to his camp and in Chicago, Mayor Jane Byrne, who had been eagerly courted by Carter people, threw her support behind Kennedy.

Campaign chairman Smith, who also ran John Kennedy's successful campaign in 1960, told reporters yesterday he expects an "extremely long and difficult" race.

Asked about Chappaquiddick, the 1969 incident in which a young female companion of Kennedy was drowned after a late-night party, Smith said:

Personal tragedy

"I think the senator has taken responsibility in this. It was a great personal tragedy for him. It will always be with him." But whether it becomes a crucial campaign issue, he said, is up to American voters.

Kennedy got some mixed notices Monday in two of the most influential publications in the country. Writing in the New York Times, columnist William Safire recalled an incident 20 years ago when Kennedy, then a college student, reportedly tried to hide from a traffic policemen who had caught him speeding in his car.

Also Monday, Time magazine ran a generally favorable cover story on the Massachusetts senator that stressed his qualities as a family man.

Alive and well

Mayor Mike Young's statement "wondering where the environmental spokesmen have been" over oil tankers on the B.C. coast absolutely shatters us.

In 1970, I was president of SPEC and at that time when Alaskan oil tankers off our coast appeared probable we made a submission to the transport commission. Some recommendations were: double hulled tankers, dual navigational and radio-telephone installations, pilots for port approaches and entry and shore based approach control systems.

In 1971, we gathered a 60,000 signature petition of concern over the proposed oil tanker route. That petition was taken by my wife across Canada to the office of the Secretary of the Interior, Washington, D.C. My wife Gwen, and 60-year-old Alice Coppard hitchhiked across Canada to Washington, D.C. and back. En route they spoke to politicians in Ottawa and at public meetings in various Canadian cities.

Between 1970 and 1972 we submitted five briefs to the federal government over the oil tanker issue. We tried so hard to enlist the support and concern of coastal municipalities in B.C. but to no avail. We were regarded as ecological nuts then!

By 1972 we were so frustrated by lack of responses from the federal government, the provincial government and local governments we virtually gave up. Since then, SPEC and many other groups again took up the challenge, the Kitimat Oil Coalition was formed and made representations to the ill-fated hearings chaired by Dr. Andrew Thompson.

The National Energy Board recently decided to hold hearings in eastern Canada on the proposed pipeline through the Yukon and B.C. It is only due to pressure from the environmentalists that one hearing was scheduled here in Vancouver. CASE is but one of many concerned groups and as such has recently sent numerous telegrams and letters in Ottawa and expended monies (from members' fees and small donations) in dozens of telephone conversations with other groups over the oil transportation issues.

Mayor Young has to realize the environmentalists are alive and well, putting in an amount of "back room" effort. He and others we elect to ostensibly look after our environment must understand we remember the past negative responses, at times ridicule, on many environmental matters we have brought forward.

We would welcome objective dialogue with the municipalities about: oil transportation, energy conservation and alternatives, treating our wastes as resources to be used again.

Your move, Mayor Young! — Derrick Mallard, Citizens Association to Save the Environment.

Serve the tourist

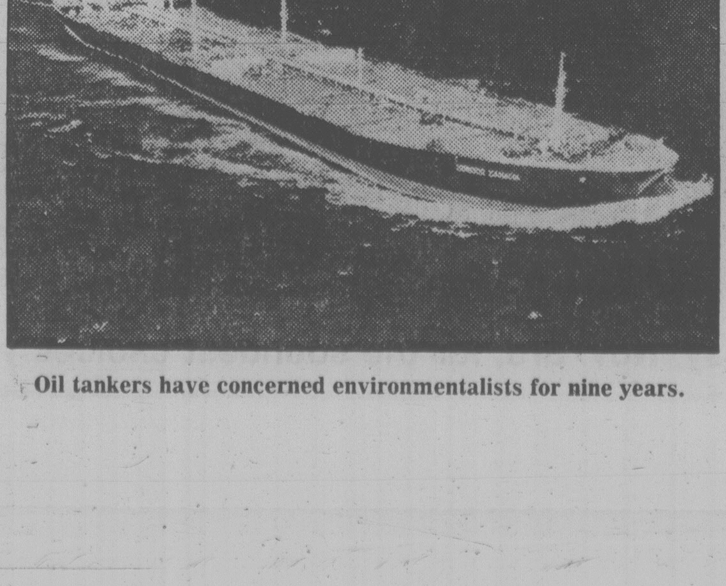
The only sense that has emerged from the plaintive bleats over the demise of the Princess Marguerite is that Victoria/Seattle seagoing passenger transportation must continue, preferrably under the Canadian flag.

To equate the loss of the ship to creation of a serious gap in the "heritage" perception of this area Times editorial of Oct. 24) is sheer nonsense.

This gap already has been created by the generally willy-nilly development of the Saanich peninsula to suit the needs of speculators and politicians, to the extent that our scenic charm has already been lost beyond recall, except for the spasmodic applications of costly and generally ineffective cosmetic surgery (e.g., Crystal Garden).

The "Maggie" was, inexcusably, not much better than a garbage scow before her recent renovation. And I have since not talked to any visitors via that route (whether American, European or Canadian) who has been enthusiastic about the ship itself or the services provided (including the dock and customs facilities).

Several things are urgently needed. First, one or more modern new vessels of the cruise ship variety, specifically designed for the task. (These might be supplemented in time, or in the interim, by high speed commuter craft). The design of the new ships might well give passengers the opportunity to use them as their "hotel" while in part. Second, the schedules should give visitors to Seattle from here an even break, which is not now the case. Third, the new vessels should serve as the foundation for a "fleet" of B.C. cruise ships that would open up the Island and the Lower Mainland, at last, as part of an integrated long-term plan to capitialize on the lucrative tourism opportunities that B.C. offers, as compared to Scandanavia for example. Fourth, stop the vulgar, debasing worship of the Almighty Dollar at every turn of the tourism dial. Stop the cheapening and destructive confrontations that seem to endlessly mark the approach of so many of those who seem to think they have a vested interest in catering to the travelling needs of our visitors and outselves (as well as the financial wrangling and the gouging of the "geese who are laying all those golden eggs"), too often for such sparse return in goods and pleasure. Fifth, severely curb those public bodies which are scarring our scenery in the name of expediency or progress. Sixth, wake up to the real wants and needs of visitors — the competition is both smart and hungry! — G. I. Powell, Victoria.



Oil tankers have concerned environmentalists for nine years.

Annual gathering

Graduates of St. John's College, Winnipeg, residing in B.C. will hold their annual gathering and luncheon in the Empress Hotel on Nov. 1 starting at 11:30 a.m. The guest speaker will be the Rev. Canon J. R. Brown D.D., Warden of the College who will speak on the work of the college today. Prior to the meeting a service of Holy Communion will be held in the Chapel of Christ Church Cathedral at 11 a.m. For information phone the undersigned at 386-2820. — Rev. Caron J. Rogers, 963 Arundel Drive.

Tighten exports

Many thanks for your enlightening article "A Fait Accompli" of Oct. 17. The third paragraph mentioning that the most important advantage to the USA lies in the pipeline being entirely under Amonercan control should make it clear to every Canadian that our smiling neighbor to the south uses a cloak of friendliness to cover a core of self-interest as hard and inflexible as flint.

While no one can or should blame another country's government for acting in the best interests of its own citizens, the converse is equally true, and the time is long overdue for our government to protect us against losing what still remains of our non-renewable resources. Parting with minerals of any kind is very foolish but, in view of the appalling disaster facing the whole world upon the depletion of its energy supplies, I consider any person to be a traitor to our country who approves the export of one more gallon of oil or another cubic foot of natural gas. — W. F. Love, 402-710 Lampson Street.

Puzzling analogy

After reading Thomas Swafford's interesting article on smoking, I'm puzzled by one or two things.

To begin with, how can you compare (smoking and drinking) at least the way he tried to? He insists that drinkers are a health hazard and a danger to non-drinkers the way smokers are to non-smokers. Does this mean, then, that I can become alcoholically intoxicated by sitting next to a drinker? I think that Mr. Swafford missed the point. Alcohol and tobacco affect whoever partakes of them, true. However, alcohol affects only those who drink it, while cigarette smoke affects anyone nearby, whether they are smoking or not.

He sees no reason to be concerned for those non-smokers around him who object to his smoking. Apparently, if the person doing the objecting were to have a lung or cardiovascular problem, such as asthma, he would feel within his rights to say "That's not my problem, it's yours", and keep right on smoking.

I think the point he failed to note is that by designating some areas as "Non-Smoking", you then automatically make other areas "Smoking" areas. This is the case on the B.C. Ferries. If a non-smoker were to find it uncomfortable while in the "Smoking" section, then he would have no right to complain: He would, however, be able to get up and move to one of the "Non-Smoking" sections. Thus, both sides are, in reality, being protected by the use of designated areas. It's not a non-smoker's fault if he or she doesn't smoke anywhere, so why blame non-smokers at all?

One other question, for anyone who hasn't quite seen my point yet: When was the last time you heard a smoker turn to a non-smoker and say "Excuse me, but your not-smoking is bothering me; could you please stop it?" You see, it's not the smoker that objected to: it's the cigarette. — R. Silver, 417-3187 Shelbourne Street.

Park access

It's good to see that Saanich's planning committee is taking steps to rectify the loss of public accesses to Prospect Lake. At election time Oak Bay residents should wonder why their council has failed to act against the loss of a public path to Walbran Park.

A six-foot pathway used to link Barclay and Denison, up the southwest side of Gonzales Hill. It provided the only legal access to Walbran Park from the southwest, until homes were built on the hillside.

The municipality allowed the path to become overgrown. Judicious landscaping and fencing by two homeowners now gives no hint that a path ever existed there. In effect, it has been given away.

For more than three years I have asked Oak Bay council to reopen this patch. Last spring its public works committee agreed to do the work, then hurriedly backed down when the two property-owners objected. Only Ald. Peter Bunn argued for restoration.

Having obtained legal advice, I am told there is no protection in law for this public amenity. The matter rests with the conscience of council.

Mayoral and aldermanic candidates in Oak Bay always promise to preserve the quality of life. Where do they stand on this small but symbolic issue? — W. Stavdal, 2106 Marne Street.

Give a damn

I must comment upon your recent editorial, Individual Rights Overlooked in the Oct. 23 Times. I feel as you do that while child abuse assistance is of paramount importance, the present format is in considerable danger from many points both personal and legal.

1. In reality, the general public is at this moment virtually at the mercy of all and any malcontents, immatures, irresponsibles or simply vicious individuals who have achieved the technical ability to operate a telephone.

2. We apparently have a situation where an allegation or accusation may be compiled from anonymous sources, usable in prosecution whenever the opportunity presents itself.

3. At this time investigations are being undertaken on an unprecedented scale in North America against such agencies as the FBI, CIA and even our own rightly vaunted, in my opinion, RCMP. A major criticism of the FBI has been "secret lists" and here we are in British Columbia compiling another one, with all the best intentions, of course.

I believe the cure to the horrendous situation is within us personally. The basic caring for and loving of those we bring into this world is the key. Just give a damn. If you belt the kids because your hangover is killing you, why in God's name get one. Do you have to hit the kid because you are out of work? The available self questions are endless but they lead to the same conclusion to me — look at self straight in the eye and honestly just give a damn. — E. Short, Victoria.

Rene flips the power switch

QUEBEC — A lot of juice! When Premier Rene Levesque put his finger on that button Saturday, and the water from La Grande River started turning the turbines, a lot more than electricity was sent humming toward Montreal. It's a matter of power — power which is also wealth, security, prestige. Rene Levesque hopes there are referendum votes to be fished out of the rivers flowing into James Bay.

The "project of the century," Robert Bourassa called it back in 1971. It has now become the paradox of the decade. The proposal to harness the northern rivers was considred ludicrous by the Parti-Quebecois when it was out of power. With all the moral vehemence which is the party's rhetorical trademark, the big guns fired away at James Bay. They treated it as the folly of the century, and managed to convince much of public opinion — particularly the segment of it working in the news media — that developing hydro-electric resources rather than nuclear power was a catastrophic decision which would irrevocably commit Quebec's technology to the wrong century.

Today, Premier Levesque never gives a referendum speech without evoking the singular good fortune of Quebeckers who are possessed of vast electrical power for as long as the rivers flow. There is no need to fear the future when Quebec has "50,000 megawatts which will flow in the year 2000 and as far as we can see into the future, the equivalent of 1.5 million barrels of oil a day, long after the oil wells of Alberta are no longer mentioned because they are dry." That is how he put it a week ago in Montreal, and, with variations, he makes the same pitch in all his referendum speeches.

Rene Levesque was less enthusiastic about the historic significance of the James Bay development in his column in Le Journal de

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

Montreal in May, 1971. (But, oh, he did write a good column!)

"It is with a smile touched with nostalgic tenderness that I heard of the electrifying speech of Mr. Bourassa Friday at his birthday party in Quebec. 'James Bay is the key to Quebec's economic and social progress, the key to Quebec's political stability, the key to Quebec's future.'

"Is that all! A real Aladdin's key, a skeleton key that opens all the locks to fairyland. But how far away it is, that magic land — about as far as the northern 'vision' which came one day, you will remember, to Diefenbaker — and then it disappeared."

Levesque was ironic. Jacques Parizeau, who went on to become finance minister, was explosive. His judgment was respected, because he had been one of the wizards who negotiated the Churchill Falls agreement which has been so advantageous to Quebec.

"Delirium," Mr. Parizeau called the James Bay proposal.

Rene Levesque, columnist, quoted another Parizeau comment: "At the end of the project we will have unemployed workers, too expensive electricity, we'll have exported our physicists and our specialized manpower while the Americans and the Ontarians, like the Europeans, will have picked up the know-how of nuclear energy and they will sell us the reactors, the parts and their manpower . . . Quebec will once more miss an industrial revolution."

In that same May of 1971, Parizeau gave an interview to Quebec-Presse in which he again said what he thought of James Bay: "Hydro-electric power is obsolete. Dams and their water turbines, compared to nuclear reactors, are candles compared to electricity. It is to nuclear energy that we must turn to get electricity at a good price . . . (The nuclear reactors) will be built elsewhere, technological and industrial development will be elsewhere. It will be in Ontario and in the United States. And we will say once again: maudits Anglais!"

Ironically, the James Bay development is now the boast of the PQ regime. A moratorium has been put on all nuclear development. Premier Levesque gloats constantly about the province's renewable power, Quebec's unique position in the world.

Ironically, James Bay probably saved Quebec from something close to disaster in the past three years. Private investment dried up in Quebec after the PQ came to power, but the slack in the economy was taken up by the billions being invested in James Bay.

Drug addiction now epidemic in affluent West Germany

By ELLEN LENTZ

WEST BERLIN — West Germany has been troubled for some time by the growing use of illicit drugs. But only of late have West Germans come to the painful realization that drug abuse in general, and heroin abuse in particular, are approaching epidemic proportions in this affluent country known for its hard-working people and middle-class views.

The most alarming development is a rapidly mounting death toll from narcotic overdoses, expected to reach 600 this year in a country of 60 million people. The rate far exceeds corresponding figures in other Western countries. In the United States, for example, the number has dropped from about 1,800 a year 10 years ago to 360 a year in a population of more than 220 million.

EASE of crossing European borders with drugs was demonstrated by this news team with bags of powdered sugar resembling heroin at checkpoint in Basel, Switzerland, on the frontier with West Germany.

Last week, the illustrated magazine Der Stern, featured a cover photo of a young woman, needle in hand, lying dead in a public toilet. "In no other country is heroin abuse as bad as in West Germany," the caption read, "more than 400 deaths in nine months, most of them young people such as this 17-year-old girl.

Under the impact of these statistics, Judge Gerd Pfeiffer of the federal court in Karlsruhe has demanded that sentences for drug dealers be raised from the present four-to-six years to a maximum of 15 years. He said the wave of hard drug crimes was hitting the Bonn republic "with the force of an avalanche," adding that annual drug-related deaths have topped the yearly totals for victims of murder and manslaughter.

As in the United States, drug use is considered a crime in West Germany, although convicted offenders are often given suspended sentences. But under new government legislation to be submitted to Parliament early next year, the courts would have discretion to place abusers in a hospital or a rehabilitation centre instead of jailing them.

Experts attribute the growing use of illicit drugs in West Germany to the swift expansion of heroin supplies from Pakistan, Afghanistan, and to a lesser degree, Iran. These countries, whose opium crops are estimated to have increased by 30 per cent in recent years to about 1,000 tons this year, have replaced the "Golden Triangle" of Southeast Asia as Europe's principal heroin source. With all three countries undergoing political and social upheaval, drug control has become ineffective, particularly in the remote and disputed border regions between Pakistan and Afghanistan, where most of the illicit poppy crops are raised.

The drug, refined in Middle Eastern laboratories, is smuggled to West Berlin, West Germany, Austria, Switzerland and other centres in Central and Western Europe via Turkey, the main transit point. The preferred route into the Continent is by land across the Balkans, but traffickers also use air and sea routes. American officials fear that Middle Eastern heroin may soon hit illicit markets in the United States and Canada.

It is on the diplomatic front — putting pressure on supplier countries to halt production and intensify law enforcement — that the United States has been urgently seeking cooperation from European countries, although so far without full success. David Anderson, the highest-ranking American diplomat in West Berlin, noted recently that the drug epidemic was posing a threat not only to young Europeans and United States troops stationed in Europe, but to Western society as a whole. In addition to Germany, Italy, France, the Benelux and the Scandinavian countries have been hard hit.

In Anderson's view, the Germans are just beginning to recognize "that they have the same hard drug problem the United States faced 10 years ago." Heroin supplies in the United States were subsequently reduced through mutual control arangements with Mexico and Turkey, formerly big poppy-growing areas. The American diplomat noted, however, that Bonn and other West European governments had recently written off Afghanistan's foreign debt without including a "poppy clause" requiring the country to cut opium production. However, the West Germans have doubled their contribution to United Nations projects for Pakistan and Afghanistan intended to replace opium cultivation with other crops and to assist in law enforcement.

West Berlin, one of Europe's cheapest and deadliest heroin markets, offers grim evidence that despite valiant efforts, there seems little possibility of controlling drug abuse without drying up supplies. With a heavy concentration of close to 100,000 Turks in the city, there is constant travel back and forth to the Middle East, most of it legitimate. But Turkish workers are often hired by drug-smuggling rings as couriers, and they hide the heroin in their cars or luggage.

The relative ease and directness of the trafficking routes accounts for the extreme potency of the heroin — sometimes 80 per cent pure — that reaches the West. According to experts, this potency accounts for the high death rate. In West Berlin, a city of two million people, there are 4,000 to 6,000 heroin users. Close to 90 drug-related deaths occurred last year, most of them from overdoses.

A touch too much of class

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — Just when everyone thought the whole subject was dead, there's been a tremendous upsurge of interest in class in Britain. A TV series called "To The Manor Born" gets its laughs from the contrast between a well-born lady displaced from her stately home and the rich food manufacturer who has taken it over. It is getting amazingly high ratings.

Debrett, who used to publish only the mouldering guide to the Peerage, Baronetage and, if you please, Knightage, has been bought by an American wise to the potential of snobbery as an export product, and is turning out half-comic books about the habits of the English gentleman as fast as their tame gentleman can produce them. And one of Britain's top columnists, pretty and sexy Jilly Cooper, has hit everyone between the eyes with a book on class that's being massively serialized in a popular paper.

Jilly Cooper's angle is a good deal more realistic and up to date than either of the other two (apart from making a wildly funny book). She's aware of all the minute shadings between the upper classes (keen on dogs and not too bright), the upper-middle (best educated and most intelligent, therefore the silliest when it comes to welcoming trends like ethnic clothes and wheatgerm), the Nouveaux-Richards, working-class in origin and now throwing their diamonds about all over the place; the middle-middles who live in the same sort of clean, attractive suburban houses as their American or Australian counterparts; the lower-middles, desperately trying to keep one respectable step above the workers; and the good old working class itself, which no one seems to remember are more than 50 per cent of the population.

So who on earth bothers with all this, apart from advertisers desperately dividing people into groups so they can sell them things? (And often getting it wrong — photographers are Class III, but what about the Earl (of Snowdon?). I doubt if the real working class gives a hoot — they're much more concerned with the distinction between one bit of the estate and another, between the 'rough' types down the road and the 'respectable' ones.

And one supposes, does one not, that the real upper classes do not bother with this sort of thing — though it's interesting that they are at least sufficiently aware of public relations to make out they're all desperately hard up.

In fact, 40 per cent of the nation's wealth is owned by people in Debrett, although that does include Life Peers, some of whom are just rich men turned aristocrats. But then that's always been the case in England — enough money plus 50 years and you're a Gentleman.

It's the middle classes, the ones who don't quite know where they do stand, who may despise all these distinctions but who somehow can't stop reading about them. They're fascinated by the differences between the people who wear blazers and those who won't, between those who say "cheerybye" and those who would rather drop dead; between the girl who talks directly to the waiter because she doesn't know any better, and the one who leaves it all to her date — and, I suppose, between coarse creatures like me who use expressions like "date" and those who think all Americanisms are vulgar.

The more socially mobile everyone is, the more intrigued they are about such things, the more worried about getting it right; and contrary to what everyone believes, the British are very socially mobile indeed. In fact half their discontents follow from the fact that those whose parents just moved up may feel that they themselves are going down. But that is not, of course, what the world thinks.

It is my belief that the rest of the world needs to believe that the British are the most appalling snobs in the world, to give them a comfortable and usually quite undeserved feeling that they, themselves, are very democratic. We aren't, of course — the French are infinitely worse, aristocrats even now simply refusing, as did the Victorians in this country, to associate In Trade.

The man from Debrett told me that when a French aristocrat does prudently marry an heiress, her relations are simply written off. If Mark Phillips had married the daughter of the Compte de Paris, pretender to the non-existent French throne, the most his parents would have got from his lofty in-laws would have been a card at Christmas. It is actually because we are so turbulent in our social habits, so likely to rise up or slide down the scale, that we are so obsessively interested in what the 18th century called Manners. In fact the whole birth of the novel was due to this very fact, an interest in how people behaved — or so my old American professor always used to say.

But it's so nice for Canadians and Americans and Australians to despise us for being class-conscious — even if Australians do top the league for seeking their ancestors through the efforts of research establishments, even if it is unthinkable that anyone not rich — like Edward Heath or Margaret Thatcher or Harold Wilson — could ever become president of the United States.

So long as we are there, being toffee-nosed and old-fashioned and dishing out TV serials like 'Upstairs, Downstairs', they can actually believe that they don't make such distinctions themselves. They can ignore the fact that there hasn't been a tribe since the world began that doesn't have its social distinctions, its ranking system; and that it is only those who believe that social barriers can be crossed or eroded who are interested in working out where they lie.

BCRIC hits the road

HELLIWELL
. . . experimenting

The president of the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. says that since the corporation's two million shareholders can't all come to him, it's his job to take BCRIC to shareholders.

David Helliwell said Monday following a day of meetings on Salt Spring Island he believes he has succeeded in bringing BCRIC to the people there.

"It's virtually impossible to bring the people to BCRIC as we've got two million shareholders, with 135,000 of them being registered shareholders (holding 100 or more shares)," he told a group of high school students.

"So I'm bringing BCRIC to the people. This is an experiment and I want you to imagine that you represent all of the shareholders of B.C. Resources."

The Salt Spring tour was a trial run that could result in a series of BCRIC shareholders meetings throughout B.C.

The schoolroom was packed with students, all there voluntarily.

Unlike a later Chamber of Commerce meeting, the students bombarded Helliwell with questions, leaving him at one point rather embarrassed when he was unable for a second to name the partner firms working on BCRIC oil and gas lands.

After a pause, Helliwell recited the list of companies.

One question at the school and later at the chamber meeting was when will the corporation decide what to do with its $487 million in cash reserves.

Helliwell reiterated that an announcement will be made within a year.

He was asked by a student to disclose his annual salary.

"I haven't disclosed it publicly, but I can tell you I make a whole lot less than many in comparable positions in the private sector," he said.

Helliwell blamed the drop in BCRIC prices (the stock closed at $6.70 Monday) from a high of $9.12 in September on skyrocketing interest rates and pure speculation.

He said BCRIC is not a short-term investment, but he sees prospects for a good return in the medium and long term.

All eligible B.C. residents received five free shares in the corporation under a plan announced early this year by Premier Bill Bennett.

Most traffic faces ban on Government St. mall

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A real pedestrian mall on Government Street came another step closer Tuesday when downtown merchants backed a proposal to ban most traffic next summer.

A plan to block through traffic on Government and make the downtown mall mostly automobile-free received approval from the Central Business District advisory committee of city council.

Drafted by Victoria's traffic engineering department, it would see all northbound traffic except buses banned from entering Government at the Humboldt-Wharf-Government intersection.

Vehicles would still be able to enter the mall by turning right off Humboldt or from the side streets of Broughton, Courtney, Fort or View and travel north on the one-way section stretching up to Yates, but it's expected the partial ban will greatly reduce traffic on the mall.

It also involves making two lanes of Wharf northbound and one southbound to carry commuters and through traffic around the mall, instead of the present configuration of two southbound and one northbound.

And no longer will drivers coming south on Wharf be able to proceed through the intersection east onto Humboldt.

The committee heard demands from Downtown Business Association president Pip Holmes for even more traffic on Government, but the members finally backed a motion by Eaton's manager Reg Hind to give the traffic ban a tryout next summer.

Ald. Bill McElroy said the plan should be in effect for the May 24 weekend and will be evaluated by the business advisory committee after it has been in operation.

Traffic engineer Derek Wild told them no decision will be made on whether to make it permanent or only a summer feature to control the crowds of tourists, or to scrap it altogether, until merchants have expressed their views.

He added that the plan had the advantage of costing only a few thousand dollars whereas the alternative — putting new lights at Humboldt and Broughton — would cost $50,000.

McElroy, chairman of council's traffic subcommittee who unsuccessfully tried last year to get a totally traffic-free mall at certain hours during the day in the summer, said he thought the change would probably create a virtually traffic-free pedestrian mall on the southern section.

Wild said the plan evolved from surveys noting licence plates of vehicles which showed that about 40 per cent of those entering the mall at Humboldt during rush hour were heading straight through without stopping to park and shop.

He said the problem of the Government mall is that it is too successful. In summer, too many people are walking up the east side of the mall and conflicting with traffic at Humboldt and Wharf.

Holmes said downtown merchants were glad to see crowds of cars and people in the area.

"Government Street is a damned desert down there now. We would like a hell of a lot more traffic on Government Street during the day."

He said the proposal would keep out the 60 per cent of cars whose drivers were coming down to shop just to divert the minority of commuters who used Government to get home from the Legislative Buildings.

Holmes suggested timing the lights on Government to keep cars moving steadily, and to increase the volume of cars passing up the mall. At the same time, a 15 mile-per-hour speed limit could be imposed and enforced to make the mall safe for pedestrians.

Ald. John Hayes also opposed the traffic realignment.

"It'll be like placing an obstacle in front of a band of marauding army ants. They'll go right around it."

B.C. Hydro 'pretends' to sell gas

B.C. Hydro is only pretending to operate a butane gas service in Victoria, Mayor Mike Young charged Tuesday.

The corporation's failure to improve and upgrade gas service and its stalling on a decision over a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island constitute "one of the grossest deficiencies in energy policy that I have ever seen."

The criticism was sparked as the mayor told council's land-use planning committee of Hydro's refusal to expand gas service in Chinatown until a decision is made on the pipeline.

Gas is needed in the preparation of Chinese food, and Hydro's long-standing moratorium on new gas connections prevents new restaurants from locating in Chinatown and is inhibiting city plans for redevelopment of Fisgard Street.

Young said with a smile that perhaps Victoria should go back to generating its own gas as a private company did a century ago. The city gas works on Government were taken over by the old B.C. Electric and eventually by Hydro when it became a Crown corporation.

"They are pretending to supply a gas service. They have gone to the extent of converting mains from a low to high pressure gas systems. They have changed locations of all the mains and blown up two buildings in the process and then we wind up without knowing whether we have a gas policy or not."

North side depot backed

Downtown businessmen Tuesday swung behind the proposal to build a new bus terminal on the north side of the business district.

Pip Holmes, president of the Victoria Downtown Business Association, said there is "a pressing and immediate need" to study the need for an integrated transportation terminal bringing together buses, ferries, trains and taxis.

"North of Chinatown seems to us to be a suitable location for a terminal," he told the central business district advisory committee of council.

Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of the committee and a member of the Urban Transit Authority, said within three months the Capital Regional District should have a detailed report on the proposal.

He also noted that finally Pacific Coach Lines is working with CRD planners on the scheme. Previously, PCL was working in isolation, reportedly towards a location on the B.C. government parking lot behind the Executive House hotel.

Tindall brought with him to the meeting an artist's rendering of a possible bus terminal at Blanshard and Pandora. It showed a one-storey building, but he said it could be higher with offices or apartments on top.

City traffic engineer Derek Wild said that part of the planning should be a study of interchanges between different methods of transportation — how many people switch from PCL buses to city buses, from planes to taxis, and so on.

Maggie? Forget her

Victoria merchants appear to have given up hope that the Princess Marguerite can be saved again from the scrapyard.

"It appears to us that the Marguerite is on her way out despite the thrashings of any or all of us," Pip Holmes, president of the Downtown Victoria Business Association, said Tuesday.

He suggested the CPR's Princess of Vancouver, which this year ceased daily service between Nanaimo and Vancouver, would be a good substitute. The CPR recently announced it will run only in the summer to Nanaimo.

"The provincial government is going to have to be leaned on if anything is going to be done for next summer," Holmes told council's central business district advisory committee.

Members decided to refer the proposal to council for decision.

Manipulators cornering world's silver market

By H.J. Maidenberg
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Faced with the strong possibility that the world silver market had been cornered, at least on paper, by four groups of wealthy "manipulators," the Chicago Board of Trade, the biggest U.S. commodity exchange, moved last week to force the groups to release their hold on the silver futures market.

Meanwhile, New York's Commodity Exchange Inc., the largest metals market, acted to keep small traders away from silver futures, an equally extraordinary move.

James Sinclair, who heads a big Wall Street metals brokerage house bearing his name, said of the situation:

"The silver market has been all but destroyed by uncommonly greedy manipulators who have created a situation of illiquidity and volatility that has driven the public out of this futures market. It is obvious that sometimes those who speak for free enterprise can destroy that enterprise by excessive greed."

Who are these "manipulators?" How did they acquire their powerful hold on the global silver market? What was their guiding trading theory? Will the actions taken by the exchanges eliminate the silver corner and save many small futures speculators, not to mention those in the actual trade, from economic ruin?

The answers were provided on an off-the-record basis by a number of metals brokers last week. One expert who did not mind being quoted for the record was Franz Pick, the highly controversial international currency analyst, who said in an interview the other day, "I'm 82 and don't really care how many more enemies I make either at central banks or in the marketplace."

He identified four main groups as having manipulated the silver market, and as being largely responsible for forcing up prices by 300 per cent.

The first group he cited centered on Conticommodity Services, the brokerage arm of the giant Continental Grain Co. "All Norton Waltuch, Conti's chief metals trader, has to do is walk on the floor of the Comex and prices jump up or down, as he wishes," Pick said. Waltuch has steadfastly refused to discuss his trading operations and has termed all comments about him as "ignorant blather."

Then Pick cited "the Kuwaiti element, which is actually a much broader group of Mideast oil money that operates through the Dresdner Bank of West Germany and a number of other banks on the Continent."

As the third group, he listed the oil-rich Hunt family of Texas. The Hunt family has also refused all comment on commodity operations.

"And the fourth amorphous group consists of Bombay interests operating from London and, we believe, is largely financed by Hong Kong money," Pick said.

A number of usually knowledgeable metals traders privately confirmed the power of the Conticommodity, Hunt and Kuwaiti groups, although most did not think the Bombay group mentioned by Pick was as important as he thought.

In any event, Pick explained that these groups engaged in "block trading." By placing large orders to buy silver contracts on the Comex, in Chicago and elsewhere, they could easily run up the price by the daily permissible limits set by each exchange. "They could then step aside and let the resultant pool of unsatisfied buy orders carry the market forward the next session," the Austrian-born analyst said.

Of course, any sharp and sustained rise in silver would force those short of the metal to cover quickly, which would add upward pressure on the prices.

By building up large net long positions calling for the delivery of the metal to them on expiration of the futures contracts, Pick continued, it was inevitable that a squeeze would develop and trap those who found themselves on the short side.

$90M gamble may strike oil

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Oil Sands Technology and Research Authority and Gulf Canada Resources Inc. plan to spend up to $90 million to test a new method of recovering oil from oil sands.

The authority and Gulf have signed a letter of intent to test a new drilling approach involving the use of horizontal wells. A two-year engineering study is to be carried out initially to determine the feasibility of the project.

The first stage would cost $8 million and if a decision were made to go ahead with the second stage an additional $82 million would be spent on a seven-year field test.

Maurice Carrigy, the authority's vice-chairman, said Monday the in-place recovery tests would be funded on a 50-50 basis.

The test project will look at the use of a vertical shaft combined with horizontal tunnels and wells in recovering oil. The new approach is designed to overcome the high cost of drilling closely-spaced vertical wells from the surface, a system in which less than 20 per cent of the total well is located in an oil-bearing zone.

Carrigy said the research centres on an adaptation of a process developed in the Soviet Union.

Homebuilders the big losers in stocks dive

NEW YORK (AP) — No complaints of discrimination are likely to be filed in the wake of the stock market's steep decline earlier this month.

Big-name blue chips or unknowns, speculative high-flyers or staid yield issues, it made little difference. Investors seemed intent on dumping them all.

But as Wall Street analysts began totalling up the damage, it became readily apparent that two groups — the homebuilding and savings and loan stocks — had suffered more than most.

In the Merrill Lynch Market Letter's compilation of group performance between Oct. 5 and 16 — a period of seven sessions in which the Dow Jones industrial average fell 68 points — the homebuilders posted the biggest drop with a 22.4 per cent loss.

The savings and loans posted a 19 per cent drop to finish third in the Disaster Derby, just behind the volatile gambling issues, which were off 19.1 per cent.

The reason for the pronounced weakness in the housing and SL issues was no secret. The new plans the Federal Reserve announced Oct. 6 for clamping down on credit seemed likely to have a direct and painful impact on both industries.

Most experts agreed that sharp increases in interest rates, and curbs on the supply of money available for borrowing, could be expected to put a severe crimp on the housing markets.

In the two weeks since the Fed's announcement, some California SLs have raised their basic mortgage rates to the 14-14½ per cent range, and a few have cut back on lending plans or stopped taking mortgage applications altogether from new customers.

Merrill Lynch, which had been estimating a 20 per cent earnings gain for the industry next year, said it had changed its forecast to "little, if any, improvement over 1979 profits."

"The cost of funds for SLs will escalate sharply."

. . . check now fly later

Transport Minister Alex Fraser is clamping down on his cabinet colleagues' use of government aircraft.

In an Oct. 11 memo to ministers, Fraser said private use of government aircraft by cabinet ministers is putting a heavy strain on the air ambulance and other urgent services.

Some cabinet ministers are using the government jets to fly to destinations outside the province which are served by commercial airlines, he said, making the jets unavailable for emergency calls.

Fraser said from here on in, they now will have to get his personal permission if they want to use government aircraft to fly outside the province.

The memo also says ministers must make requests "well in advance of the proposed flight date" if they want to take advantage of a policy introduced July 31 which allows spouses free government air travel.

"That policy, for very good reasons, states that the spouses of cabinet ministers be permitted to accompany the cabinet minister on government flights," he said.

"I have now found it necessary to establish policy that ministers' spouses cannot be accepted for travel on government aircraft unless they accompany the minister on the same flight."

Fraser did not say in his memo that there had been any instances of abuse of the flying policy for spouses.

Island bands vote takeover of adult Indian education

Seven southern Vancouver Island Indian bands followed their own advice Monday by deciding to assume total control of Indian adult education.

Chiefs and councillors from the Becher Bay, Esquimalt, Songhees, Tsartlip, Pauquachin, Tsawout and Tseycum bands took the move to deal with the growing problems caused by the high dropout rate of Indian children from the provincial school system, as well as the crisis of welfare and unemployment within the bands.

Chief Thomas Sampson of the Tsartlip band was elected chairman of the adult education committee, along with representatives of the six other bands.

After the meeting the four Saanich bands — Tsartlip, Pauquachin, Tseycum and Tsawout — met separately to conduct Saanich Indian School Board business. They elected Philip Paul chairman, a move expected to strengthen Indian control at Tsartlip School and in education generally.

Paul, vice-president of the Union of B.C. Chiefs (UBCIC), recently called on that group to fight for more Indian control of Indian education.

He castigated the provincial government for using white standards to judge Indians and then putting Indian children in white foster homes.

Commenting on the decisions taken Monday, Paul said: "This is the beginning. This is the action we were talking about."

Paul said that adult education is now handled by the federal Indian Affairs department and the provincial education ministry.

He said the province's community colleges tried to take over Indian adult education without consulting the Indians, but the UBCIC rejected the proposal at its last convention.

He said that existing programs were not coordinated with Indian aims, and nothing significant has come out of government programs for the past 30 years.

Band approves health inquiry

ALERT BAY (CP) — Members of the Nimpkish Indian Band have welcomed announcement of a public inquiry into the delivery of health services to Indians living on northern Vancouver Island and nearby mainland areas.

But they are concerned about the death of a 16-year-old Indian girl who died in hospital Friday of a drug overdose.

Band members have been calling for an inquiry since the death Jan. 22 of Rene Smith, an 11-year-old Indian girl who died of a ruptured appendix and gangrenous appendix.

A coroner's jury in June ruled the doctor who attended the girl, Dr. Jack Pickup, was negligent.

"Maybe some of the things we want to get out will come up in this inquiry," said band member Bill Cranmer. "We hope that after this inquiry is over we can determine how our people can get the best health care."

Cranmer said that in September, when federal Health Minister David Crombie visited Alert Bay, on an island off northeastern Vancouver Island, he promised to consider an inquiry.

Crombie's executive assistant, Skip Brookes, announced Tuesday that a one-person inquiry will begin soon.

Cranmer said the band also wants to know why an inquest has not been ordered into the death Friday of Elizabeth Robertson, 16.

She had been living with an aunt since her monther died 18 months ago, but had been in a provincial government receiving home for about a week before she died.

Coroner William Deadman said he has not called an inquest because an autopsy has not yet been performed.

He said he will decide whether to call an inquest after receiving autopsy reports.

Victim can't identify kissing cop

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A man who claims he was assaulted after he witnessed a New Westminster policeman kissing a women moments after she stepped out of a police van couldn't identify his assailant in provincial court Tuesday.

Constables Robert McGirr, 27, and Dennis Vermiere, 32, are charged with assault causing bodily harm.

Bewzak told New Westminster provincial court Judge Alfred Scow that he was beaten up by police after protesting the conduct of an officer May 31. Both policemen pleaded not guilty.

Bewzak said he left a local hotel and a paddy wagon stopped after passing him. A woman got out and, he said, he saw a policeman get out of the passenger side and embrace her.

Bewzak said he watched the pair kiss for about two minutes. The woman then walked off and smiled at him as she passed.

He said he was upset with the policeman's behavior and went over to the driver and told him that the police should be out catching criminals, not standing around hustling women. He threatened to report them.

At this the driver jumped out and threw him against the side of the wagon, then ordered him to get in, Bewzak testified.

Bewzak said he was taken to a quiet area where he was ordered out, then struck on the face. He said he didn't see who aimed the blow, but looked around to see both policeman run over to the van and drive away.

$4,000 tax fine

MATSQUI (CP) — Farm operator Harbhajan Singh Mahairhu of Abbotsford was fined $4,000 or eight months in jail on default of payment when he pleaded guilty Tuesday in provincial court to two charges under the Income Tax Act.

He admitted making false statements on income tax forms and with evading income tax for the years 1976 and 1977 involving $25,000.

Bar bounces affectionate gays

VANCOUVER (CP) — The evening was made for romance and Robert Joyce and his companion exchanged light kisses and, from time to time, put their arms about one another over a drink in a hotel lounge in Vancouver's West End.

But the tender mood was shattered abruptly when they were thrown out for such public displays of affection.

Joyce, 31, and his companion are gay.

They were so incensed at the "embarrassing and demeaning" incident Sept. 15 that they asked Roger Herbert, the city's director of licences and permits, to fine the lounge, lift its licence temporarily, or warn management to stop, in their words, "such vicious and blatant discrimination."

However Hebert told them during a meeting Tuesday, attended also by the hotel's general manager, that the city licensing bylaw forbids discrimination on the basis of race, creed or color. There is no mention of sexual orientation.

The Gay Alliance Toward Equality (GATE) now says it will ask city council to amend the bylaw and will press the provincial Human Rights Branch to broaden its legislation.

Hebert said he agreed with hotel manager John Van Ommen that individual premises have the right to set standards of patron conduct. If gay affection is unacceptable to management, it can eject the offenders.

In a letter to GATE, Van Ommen admitted that his staff handled the matter in less than an ideal fashion, but maintained that Joyce and his friend "were behaving in a manner which is unacceptable by any standard of civilized public social behavior."

But Dan Hann, a spokesman for Vancouver's gay community, said homosexuals ought to have the same right as heterosexuals to show public affection.

"Cooling it in public is the same as saying 'back to the closet,' " he said.

Little trust seen block to energy

VANCOUVER (CP) — The lack of public confidence in science and technology is blocking creation of a Canadian energy policy, Erich Vogt, chairman of the Science Council of British Columbia said Tuesday.

Canadians trust folk wisdom more than rational expert advice, he told a seminar on air pollution and energy, especially in the debate over nuclear power.

For many people nuclear power appears mysterious and they believe only untrustworthy experts can understand it, he said.

Nuclear power is not perfectly safe, he admitted. But he said that the operational hazards of Canadian nuclear reactors "do not constitute risks that we are not prepared to take in other forms of energy conservation."

Solar energy, which is often regarded as the great energy hope of mankind, will have little role in Canada's future beyond space-heating, he said.

He suggested Canada instead turn its efforts to fusion, the process where energy is formed by the joining of atoms, as the energy source of the future.

"Aside from a few British Columbians who confuse fusion with fission, fusion is regarded as an attractive alternative because the sun's own energy source is similar to fusion reactions."

The whole field of fusion could break open at any time, he said.

So-called hired assassin's death ruled accidental

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Despite hearing testimony of a bizarre murder plot Tuesday, a coroner's jury has ruled that the death of a 20-year-old alleged hired assassin was accidental.

The jury found that Chris Holm, whose body was found floating in Georgia Strait off Roberts Bank south of Vancouver in August, 1978, died probably as the result of a boating accident.

Earlier Tuesday, the jury had heard testimony from Donna Leary, Holm's former girlfriend, that the young man had been hired by businessman Donald Bell for $10,000 to kill an associate, Sadroo Alibhai of Richmond.

Both Alibhai and Bell disappeared three days before Holm's body was found and their whereabouts is not known.

Back on rails

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rail service has been restored following a derailment that damaged track about 40 kilometres south of Williams Lake in central British Columbia, B.C. Rail spokesman Hugh Armstrong said. Ten empty freight cars and four engines of a northbound freight train jumped the track Sunday.

Hydro hang-up

NELSON (CP) — Residents of the West Kootenays will have to wait another two months before they know whether their electrical bills will be increased and by how much. Hearings on a rate increase application were adjourned Tuesday until Jan. 3 after West Kootenay Power and Light asked for an additional six per cent on increases it had applied for earlier. It had already asked for an average 25-per-cent increase for most users and 33 per cent for bulk users.

Labor complaint

VANCOUVER (CP) — An unfair labor practice complaint was filed Tuesday by the union which has waged a bitter 18-month strike against the Muckamuck native Indian restaurant. In its complaint before the British Columbia Labor Relations Board, the Service, Office and Retail Workers Union of Canada, Local 1, said management has bargained in bad faith, harassed and intimidated members and tried to destroy the right of the employees to union protection. As examples, the union said the restaurant had sought injunctions, tried to have the union decertified and used professional strikebreakers behind the picket lines.

Teachers settle

CRESTON (CP) — Teachers in Creston have agreed to a nine-per-cent salary increase in a one-year contract, making them the second group of British Columbia teachers to settle with the local school district. Last week, 68 teachers in the Fort Nelson school district accepted a two-year contract with a 9.8-per-cent raise in the first year and nine per cent in the second year.

Workers out

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — North Central Plywood Ltd. was shut down Tuesday as employees remained off the job in a dispute over a new contract. Contract talks between the company and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada have broken off and strike notice was served last week.

Convention will question leadership

The campaign, under Bennett's direction, saw the NDP capture 47 per cent of the popular vote and cut Social Credit's majority of 35 of 55 seats to 31 of 57.

Controversial cabinet decisions to spring farmland from the Agricultural Land Reserve for development, sloppy drafting of legislation, the government's failure to deliver a promised energy policy and a proposal to replace the regional district system of local government with county councils are also expected to come under fire.

The latest twist in the dirty tricks affair involves the forgery of the name of a prominent NDP supporter on a Social Credit membership form in the Yale-Lillooet riding.

NDPer J. K. Brown Sr. says news of his alleged switch to Social Credit was spread throughout the constituency in an apparent attempt to discredit the NDP just before the provincial election.

He said he considered the matter a bad joke, but took the matter to the RCMP after the dirty tricks disclosures and agreed to press charges if the person who committed the forgery is found.

Chrysler loses $460.6M

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said Tuesday it lost $460.6 million in the third quarter — a loss for the single quarter that was larger than than any reported by a U.S. company in an entire year.

The huge deficit, which had been expected among industry observers, may help the company's campaign for financial help from the federal government.

The third-quarter loss means that the No. 3 automaker has lost $721.5 million so far this year — $53.8 million for the first quarter and $207.1 million for the second.

Chrysler's latest quarterly loss amounts to $7.15 a share of common stock, and $11.41 for the year with one quarter still remaining.

Young boffins aim to disorient milfoil

By AB KENT

Three young Saanich inventors have come up with a device — it's called a TSC 1 — which they claim zaps Eurasian milfoil.

They say it's so simple and effective, they can hardly wait to put an improved version to use ridding B.C.'s recreational lakes of the pesky weed.

Barry Cameron, 17, said the device emits a sonic impulse that stuns and disorients the weed's cell structure, rendering the plant helpless to resist the coup de grace — a thermal-electric pulse of sufficient amperage to destroy it.

A prototype of the Buck Rogers-type machine was proven in a demonstration for the B.C. government at Cultus Lake and it has been tested on similar weeds in Elk Lake and Diver's Lake, near Nanaimo.

Now, Cameron and his colleagues Norman Heyer, 18, and Duane Hood, 19, are building an improved version looking something like a lawn roller. Operated easily from a boat, it can be drawn over a silt or sandy bottom.

They're so sure they have a winner they are setting up a consulting and development company to be supported in part from the proceeds they hope to earn from government and private weed control contracts.

Cameron claims the TSC 1 not only does a quick, effective job on milfoil, but is harmless to other marine life, is non-polluting and per-acre cost should be much lower than some other mechanical weed harvesters.

About $5,000 will cover the cost of construction of a large machine and the operating cost would only involve a boat, gasoline for propulsion and a small electric generator and wages for one or two attendants.

He is not sure how the government will participate.

"We're giving him all the co-operation we can," said engineer Peter Brady, of the water investigation branch, which feels the TSC 1 has potential.

No one really knows how the machine works, so more laboratory testing is recommended, Brady said.

Kelowna inventor Gordon Jennens has a $60,000 machine which has already worked for the government and there are many other machines.

Most pluck or cut the weed, allowing pieces to drift off and take root elsewhere. But none are as effective as the sonic-thermal device, says Cameron.

The TSC 1 not only immobilizes the plant and kills its nutrient-carrying core, it prevents regeneration through broken-off stems by attacking the whole organism at once.

Cameron comes up with the ideas and rough plans.

"I don't know how I do it — I don't have the background but then Norman takes it and puts it into its proper technical context."

Between them they plan development while Hood, a relative newcomer to the group, learns from both and assists in digging into literature and earlier research.

Cameron recalled from the beginning when he was 14 at Royal Oak School it was "me and Norman."

"This man, Mr. (Leslie) Wilson, our science teacher, had an optical kit and he liked to have equipment without flaws. He said he wished he had a better light ray box and we devised a new one and built it."

They've been interacting ever since.

They plan to set up a group of companies to handle various aspects of their work, from supplying funds and concepts, to building inventions, patenting and controlling the practical results.

There are 37 project ideas in their files, 24 of them exclusive. Some of the most practical, according to Cameron, might seem fantastic to the less imaginative:

— A telephone image viewer for which they designed a ceramic chip circuit to work with conventional lines.

— A mechanical arrester that baffles radar and immobilizes mechanical devices.

— A nutrient culture gel made from seawater that accelerates seed germination and allows vegetables to grow in salt water.

A letter can be a cheerer-upper or a cheeser-offer (if, indeed, there are such words) and it can give you a hint as to whether your thoughts are headed in the right direction. Or, if anyone gives a damn.

Often, if the subject is controversial, you receive several letters and usually the mail for and against seems to balance itself out. But it all helps.

Very occasionally you get a letter which is hard to read and discard. You feel you must share it with others. Like one I received after my column a week ago on Indian leader Philip Paul's criticism of the public education system.

Written by James Ward, a social worker who lives on Wyndeatt Avenue and who believes the Indians' plight cannot be overcome merely by changing the education setup but by encouraging them to help themselves, the letter reads:

"Max, has anyone ever whispered in the good chief's ear that those Freudian myths and whipping post psychological theories are as outdated as his philosophies?

". . . That when the child comes of age he then carries the responsibilities of his existence?

". . . That the here and now — and what each and every one of us is doing about that — is the measure of men?

". . . That talk is cheap whereas communication — speaking wisely and listening deeply — is an art form once paramount among the Indian language groups that he now represents?

". . . That the disintegration of the social framework of our present societies is the base reason for the social ills that he — and so many of his fellow spokesmen — beats the drum of time about?

". . . That the Indian is a child of our time whose social structure has not progressed but sadly disintegrated?"

Ward then said he would like, through me, to address the chief, directly, briefly, concernedly:

"Chief, can I for one brief moment in time catch the knowing ear that hears all things wisely and share a few thoughts with one who does, but also thinks of what he does, and why it is done and to whom it is done!

"Chief Paul, what I am asking is that we share each other's thoughts just briefly. For there can be no communication unless I stand at times in your shoes and you in mine . . . that both may see and hear truth.

"Chief, will you consider that the statements you have made and the answers expected that were not forthcoming, could conceivably not have been heard — and therefore were not intelligible?

"Chief, we who labor in the social fields, find our thoughts and frustrations constantly centred on establishing intelligent two-way communications. We who work at rehabilitation with and among your sons and daughters seek most earnestly to effect this awakening as we pursue their realistic rehabilitative goals.

"Chief, when ultimately we see the spark of life return to their dull, lifeless eyes and features and hear that first weak response of intelligent appreciation, we know that a caring father can again look upon his children with great pride and compassion.

"Chief, none of us knows the answers; few of us even know the questions. So we try and put together what we've got at present and do the best we can.

"Chief, get native social group workers educated and established at all your social levels and spheres and direct them to lead your people to their own salvation. Helping people to help themselves is the mark of a far-seeing leader and a man to follow.

"Chief, a group, socially bound and sound, can fear nothing but fear itself. Please don't leave it to teachers. It is the child's parents who provide the richness that is to be its heritage!"

VGH proposed as site for UVic geriatric unit

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria General Hospital should be retained as a centre for geriatric medicine, forming the foundation for a school of gerontology at the University of Victoria.

The recommendation is contained in a special report done for the Downtown Business Association which will go to Victoria city council on Thursday.

Lawyer Gerald Neely prepared the report, which says Victoria would be an ideal location for such a special school of medicine. Sixteen per cent of the region's population is over 65, much higher than other parts of Canada, he said.

Statistics suggest that by 1986 the 9.8 per cent of Canada's over-all population which is 65 or older will need 38 per cent of all hospital beds. By 2001 this is expected to rise to 42 per cent, Neely said.

"Their problems and the opportunity to resolve those problems through their participation in studies undertaken by researchers, both academic and medically, provide an opportunity unequalled elsewhere in Canada," said Neely.

VGH would provide the physical structure for the school, which could only be duplicated at a very substantial cost, while UVic would provide the administration and staff necessary to create the school.

Since this is the province's capital, "a school of gerontology sited in Victoria would be better able to serve the province of B.C. than if it were sited elsewhere.

"With the ever-increasing amounts of money committed by the provincial government to services to the older person, it is essential that the provincial government has ready access to a reliable source of information as to the services required."

Information above all is needed, he added.

Little study has been done on the process of aging because only in this century has man's life expectancy been extended through advances in medicine and science.

"It is a paradox to suggest that the study of aging is in its infancy, but it is a fact that we know more about the process by which life is created than we do about the biological processes of aging which end it."

For example, Neely said the elderly and their families would be relieved of worry and anxiety if research done at the new school of gerontology discovered that intermittent or complete memory loss is due to the natural process of aging and not disease, "factors that might ultimately be altered in some way."

Ald. Ron McKenzie, a member of the central business district sdvisory committee which received the report on Tuesday, said he will bring it to council at a committee meeting on Thursday to ask for his colleagues' endorsement of the proposal.

"It only makes sense that someone sooner or later somewhere in Western Canada will create a centre as a focus for the studies now being done in a fragmented way by various ageneies, so why shouldn't Victoria be the site?" said the alderman.

Noel delays suit decision

Ald. Sandy Noel of Saanich said today he won't decide until after the Nov. 17 election whether to launch a lawsuit against Ald. Irene Block.

Noel, who said Tuesday he would decide by mid-week, changed his mind on the advice of his lawyer. He wouldn't elaborate.

Block made the comments during a weekend conference at the University of Victoria about women in politics.

She did not name any aldermen or supply details of the slush fund and refused to retract the remark when asked by Noel at a Monday council meeting.

He said Block was referring to him and several other pro-development aldermen on council and that his good reputation may be harmed by the allegation.

Noel will talk to the other aldermen to see how they feel about the matter.

Mayor Mel Couvelier has said council as a whole will not take any action or support Noel if he proceeds with the suit.

Slush fund allegations are a recurring theme around election time, according to Couvelier, who said the only remedy is a full disclosure bylaw.

Several disclosure bylaws, some placing limits on campaign spending, have come before council in recent years and were defeated.

But Couvelier said he will re-introduce some time after the election a bylaw calling only for identification of campaign fund sources.

He said he is confident it will pass this time.

Review board 'the answer'

A civilian review board should be established to receive and investigate reports and complaints made by the public against the police department, Ald. Robin Blencoe said Tuesday.

"There have been problems of rumors and accusations made and we've got to find a way to deal with that," he said in an interview.

"The primary thing that is deeply concerning me is the effect the incidents or rumors are having on the general morale of the police department," he said.

He said the police should not be put in the awkward position of having to investigate themselves.

"There should be a procedure completely objective and independent from the department," Blencoe said.

"Some sort of civilian review board is the answer."

The police and the public have reason to think of the present process — with police carrying out the initial investigation — as overly complicated, he added.

"I think it's too much responsibility for the police."

The alderman said that emotions are running high among people he knows and citizens he talks to.

"I'm afraid the whole issue is being compounded every day by someone else saying something happened.

"We've got to clean this area up."

It's in the interests of the police and the public, said Blencoe, that complaints about police using excessive force are dealt with by a separate agency "in a rational and unemotional way."

He said he is concerned about the effects of the reports on the dedicated policemen and policewomen.

Snap, crackle, cop!

There was frost in the air early this morning and two young men on the town got nipped.

Sgt. Peter Bridgewood and Constable Lorette Hickling were doing a 4 a.m. patrol in Bastion Square when Bridgewood noticed a door ajar at Harpo's Cabaret.

The officers stood by the entrance.

Soon after, a man carrying a case of beer came out and walked obligingly into Bridgewood's arms.

Two 19-year-old Victoria men have been charged with breaking, entering and theft and will appear in provincial court.

Cougars put Kings to rest

Victoria Cougars weren't exactly perfect hosts Tuesday at Memorial Arena.

But, more important, they were almost perfect in doing what they were supposed to do and that's what counts.

In fact, they were downright inhospitable in a Western Hockey League game against Brandon Wheat Kings.

Cougars blasted the Wheat Kings 9-0 before 2,868 fans for their best-ever showing against the Prairie squad.

It also marked the first time the Brandon team has been shut out in league play since Saskatoon Blades administered a 6-0 thumping March 11, 1975. Wheat Kings, however, did suffer a 10-0 loss to Portland Winter Hawks in a playoff game last season.

Cougars jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first four minutes of the game and increased the margin to 5-0 at the end of the first period. The Victoria club scored two goals in the second period and held off a late Wheat King power play to help Grant Fuhr, a 17-year-old from Spruce Grove, Alta., record his first WHL shutout with a total of 26 saves. He was at his best in the first period, blocking nine shots, several from close range.

Rick Knickle started in the Brandon net but was pulled after giving up four goals on 15 shots. His replacement, Ron Popplestone, allowed five goals on 35 shots.

Greg Adams got his first of two goals 21 seconds into the game to start the early flurry.

Then it took only a few more minutes for rookie John Newberry, called up from Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior League, to make a meaningful contribution.

Newberry, a husky centre, set up Grant Rezansoff for the second goal at 3:33 and drew another assist on a goal by Dan Deshenes at 3:42.

Barry Pederson set up Adams' two goals to run his consecutive game point streak to 17 games, including the last five of the 1978-79 season.

The Cougars now have 11 wins in 12 starts and a six-point lead over Portland Winter Hawks in the league's Western Division.

Meanwhile, as the Cougars continued to win, New Westminster Bruins kept on losing.

New Westminster, edged 4-3 after a third-period outburst by the Bighorns in Billings, is still without a win in 13 games.

Ian Tennant signs multi-year contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks announced Tuesday the signing of defenceman Ian Tennant to a multi-year National Hockey League contract.

A spokesman for the Canucks said Tennant, 19, who plays for Saskatoon Blades of the Western Hockey League, will remain with the major junior team until the end of the season.

The six-foot, 1½-inch, 215-pound defenceman began last season with Billings Bighorns of the WHL but was traded to Saskatoon after 33 games.

Tennant finished with five goals and 21 assists in 64 games while leading the Blades in penalty minutes with 224.

NHL teams have until next Monday to sign any eligible junior players who were not chosen in the Aug. 9 entry draft.

Calgary facing lobby struggle

CALGARY (CP) — The Calgary Olympic Development Association will have to do some intense lobbying at the international level to get the 1988 Winter Olympics, a key organizer of Montreal's bid for the 1976 Summer Olympics said Tuesday.

Gerry Snyder said Montreal's organizing committee spent about $250,000, not including free passes from Air Canada and CP Air, lobbying members of the International Olympic Committee around the world in the two years prior to the 1970 awarding of the Games to Montreal.

Calgary won the support of the Canadian Olympic Association over Vancouver in Montreal Sunday to make an application to hold the 1988 Winter Games. The application will be made at an IOC meeting in September, 1981, in West Germany.

"The most important thing for Calgary at the moment is they have to start visiting IOC members in their own bailiwick," Snyder said. Snyder, now an international sports consultant, said in a telephone interview.

"You'll never get them (the IOC members) together in one place until the voting."

Bob Niven, CODA vice-chairman, said Calgary was badly behind "in the wining-and-dining" aspect of preparing a proposal for the COA to consider.

Niven said Vancouver courted COA members in the months prior to Sunday's decision, tossing in gifts of leather briefcases, calculators, photo albums and B.C. salmon. Calgary came up with white cowboy hats and books of Alberta scenery at the last minute.

Snyder said it is especially important that Calgary jump in early because Japan and several European countries are considering applying for both the Summer and Winter Games in 1988.

"Officials from Nagoya (where the Summer Games would be held in Japan) were in Montreal recently seeking information on Montreal's Games." Sapporo, the site of the 1976 Winter Olympics, and cities in Switzerland were also interested.

Snyder said IOC members are tough to deal with. "I was on the road for weeks, along with the mayor (Montreal mayor Jean Drapeau), travelling through the Middle East, Pakistan, Australia and New Zealand."

Taiwan protests executive move

TAIPEI (AP) — The Chinese Olympic Committee on Taiwan has decided to lodge a protest with the International Olympic Committee against a resolution calling on Taiwan to use a new flag, anthem and name, a committee official said today.

The decision was made Tuesday following an impromptu meeting by all members of the committee, the official said.

The committee official said Taiwan has appealed to all IOC members to uphold the "principle of justice to the board's forceful recommendation," which Taiwan described as a violation and departure from the world sports body's charter and the Olympic spirit.

In a press statement, the Taiwan committee said: "As a recognized International Olympic Committee member state, we have the right to demand equal treatment and hope all IOC members will uphold justice and veto the executive board's resolution which violates and contradicts the committee's charter.

"At its convention in Montevideo, Uruguay, the IOC, based on the spirit of equity and fairness, had passed a resolution to recognize two national Olympic committees in China.

"However, the executive board unilaterally put pressure on us to change our flag, anthem and name. This indicates its prejudice and discrimination against us."

Houle again a saviour

By The Canadian Press

The other 20 National Hockey League coaches treat their ulcers with antacid pills, frequent glasses of milk and a bland diet. Bernie Geoffrion relies on Rejean Houle.

Twice in 10 days, the 30-year-old winger has come up with a late goal for Montreal Canadiens as the beleaguered Stanley Cup champions rallied to stave off a defeat.

On Oct. 21, Houle's first goal of the season with less than three minutes remaining gave the Canadiens a 6-6 tie at Philadelphia. He left it even later at Washington Tuesday night, firing home the equalizer with only 40 seconds left as Montreal tied the Capitals 2-2.

The tie moved the Canadiens a point ahead of Philadelphia and Buffalo Sabres in the over-all NHL standings but the Flyers have two games in hand.

In other games Tuesday, St. Louis Blues edged Edmonton Oilers 2-1, Atlanta Flames downed Colorado Rockies 3-1 and Boston Bruins tied 4-4 with Los Angeles Kings, who lead all NHL teams in scoring with 50 goals but have yielded 46 to their opponents. Only Edmonton, with 47, has been more generous.

A missed penalty shot by Guy Charron early in the first period turned out to be costly for Washington as the Capitals allowed Montreal only one shot on goal in the first 17½ minutes and shut them out for the first 58.

"They just ran out of gas," said Geoffrion, who put together a line of Guy Lafleur, Larry Robinson and Bob Gainey and was rewarded by Gainey's goal at 18:10 of the third period. "It reminded me of a Stanley Cup game."

The Caps, who have no Stanley Cup games to be reminded of in their six-year existence, are still looking for their first victory over Montreal.

Kent Nilsson, the 23-year-old Swedish centre whom Atlanta reclaimed from the World Hockey Association, scored his seventh and eighth goals of the season and his team-mates played solidly in front of goaltender Danny Bouchard, who has allowed only four goals in his last three games.

Red Lawrence fired six shots at the Edmonton net before beating goaltender Eddie Mio with his seventh for the winning goal early in the third period. It was his first point of the season and ended a four-game winless streak for St. Louis.

The Oilers, who have gone six games without a victory, were without Wayne Gretzky and Brent Callighen, two-thirds of their top scoring line, and managed only 19 shots on goal to 32 for the Blues.

Los Angeles led 3-1 at one point in the second period but needed Steve Jensen's goal midway through the third to salvage the tie.

NHL scoring leader Marcel Dionne, who scored his 10th goal of the season for the Kings, forced Gilles Gilbert to retire from the game when his shot struck the Boston goaltender on the elbow.

Switch in posts for Ed Chynoweth

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian Major Junior Hockey League announced changes Tuesday in its executive positions.

Ed Chynoweth, executive director for the past year, becomes chairman of the board, while Dave Branch, Ontario Major Junior Hockey League commissioner, takes over Chynoweth's former post.

John Horman, secretary-manager of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, has been appointed treasurer. Dave Descent, recently named Western Hockey League executive director, becomes secretary.

The new appointees will function as the CMJHL executive committee, made up of the three major junior leagues in Canada as well as the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Goermann added to Canadian squad

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Gymnastics Federation has named Monica Goermann, Canada's top female gymnast, to the national women's team competing in the world gymnastics championships in December.

Her status on the team had been uncertain as her right ankle was in a cast until a week ago.

Goermann, a native of Winnipeg, has been suffering from chipped bones and tendinitis since September. The problem kept her out of last weekend's third and final selection meet for the championships, and her name did not appear on an initial list of competitors.

Randy gets moving and Cavaliers climb

By Canadian Press

Randy Smith is a notoriously slow starter every year. But once he gets moving, "he's the fastest backcourt person in the league."

Smith scored 30 points to help the Cavaliers to a 124-112 National Basketball Association victory over Houston Rockets, snapping a four-game losing streak.

Victory vaulted the Cavaliers, 3-7, past Houston and out of the Central Division basement. The Rockets, 2-6, have lost all five of their road games so far in the young season.

Smith explained his big night by saying he felt "more relaxed."

"I probably wanted to do too much in the beginning," he added. "I just should have let myself get into the game."

Houston coach Del Harris said it was Cleveland's fast break that killed the Rockets.

"We gave up 32 points on the fast break. That's their game. We can't afford to give up that many."

Elsewhere Tuesday night, Los Angeles Lakers downed Chicago Bulls 111-105, Phoenix Suns humbled San Antonio Spurs 142-109 and Denver Nuggets beat New York Knicks 121-112.

The Rockets stayed with the Cavaliers through most of the first half, when the lead changed hands 12 times. A layup by Foots Walker with 2:27 to play put Cleveland ahead to stay at 50-48.

Houston's Rick Barry was given two technical fouls and ejected with 9:22 left in the game. Austin Carr made both free throws to give Cleveland a 96-85 lead, and the Rockets got no closer than seven the rest of the way.

Calvin Murphy led the Rockets with 21 points. Houston's Moses Malone, who leads the NBA in rebounds, picked 19 off the boards.

The Los Angeles backcourt duo of Earvin (Magic) Johnson and Norm Nixon combined for 42 points and the Lakers withstood Chicago's fourth-quarter surge to post their fifth consecutive victory.

Truck Robinson, with 23 points, led a parade of eight Phoenix players in double figures, as the Suns blew out San Antonio.

Centres Dan Issel of Denver and Bill Cartwright of New York each connected for 32, season highs for both.

Horton leaving Mariners' ranks

SEATTLE (AP) — It appears that popular, perennial slugger Willie Horton will slip from the ranks of Seattle Mariners.

On Friday, the designated hitter will be listed among the eligibles in the re-entry draft for unsigned free-agent baseball players, said Charlie Dye, his agent.

"We're going through the draft. We're not signing any two-year contract with the Mariners, I can guarantee that," Dye said.

Dan O'Brien, Mariners' president, said the club is not interested in signing Horton, 36, for five more years.

It is Dye's position that if Horton is unable to play the full five years, provision could be made to use him in another role. Apparently, O'Brien doesn't want that.

Horton had a .279 batting average with the Mariners this season, with 29 home runs and 106 runs batted in.

Expo offer rejected

MONTREAL (CP) — First baseman Tony Perez has rejected the latest contract offer of Montreal Expos and has submitted his name to the major league baseball free-agent draft.

The 37-year-old Perez announced his decision after discussing Montreal's latest offer with his agent, Reuben Katz.

Perez said the major breakdown occured when he insisted a no-trade clause be included in his contract.

Pro skiers competing for $650,000

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — For the first time in 11 years, the World Pro Skiing tour schedule is completely filled, with 13 races offering nearly $650,000 in prize money in the 1979-80 season.

The tour, which features head-to-head racing in slalom and giant slalom and occasionally downhill, begins in Austria in mid-November. Other stops are in Canada, Switzerland and the United States.

The schedule:

Nov. 17-18 — Solden, Austria, Nov. 24-25 — Saas Fee, Switzerland, Dec. 8-9 — Vail, Colo, Dec. 10-15 — Aspen, Colo, Jan. 12-13 — Hunter Mountain, N.Y., Jan. 19-20 — Stowe, Vt., Jan. 26-27 — Big White, B.C., Feb. 2-3 — Winter Park, Colo, Feb. 9-10 — Paskapoo, Alta., March 1-2 — Sun Valley, Idaho, March 8-9 — Heavenly Valley, Calif., March 15-16 — Snoqualmie Summit, Wash., March 22-23 — Mammoth Mountain, Calif.

British probe another meet

LONDON (Reuter) — A second British track and field meeting is under investigation over alleged illegal payments to competitors, a leading athletics official has confirmed.

Commenting on a newspaper report that cash payments totalling about $17,000 were made to a group of British and overseas track and field stars last year, the secretary of the British Amateur Athletic Board, David Shaw, said:

"All we can say at the moment is that we have information relating to a 1978 English meeting. The matter is now with the (English) Amateur Athletic Association who have asked the meeting organisers for full details."

A report in one newspaper claims one American athlete at the meeting was paid $3,000.

The BAAB is still conducting a similar investigation into allegations of illegal payments at the Highland Games meeting in Edinburgh 14 months ago.

The second investigation comes to light only four days before the AAA's annual meeting is scheduled to hear a proposal calling for urgent revision of amateur rules.

The call for urgent changes in the amateur rules is the latest move in an increasing campaign to remove the hypocrisy from international athletics.

The present amateur code allows limited expenses but prohibits cash prizes or appearance money. But it has long been widely known in track and field circles that top competitors are in affect full-time athletes who can command large sums from promoters eager to swell attendances at their meetings.

There have also been hints that the sport's administrators are well aware of the extent to which such payments are made, but are reluctant to take disciplinary action because too many leading figures could be banned from athletics, including the Olympic Games.

The president of the IAAF, Adrian Paulen of the Netherlands, expressed his concern at the absence of any conclusion to the Edinburgh investigation when he said: "I want to know what is happening. We can't let this matter drag on."

Praying was only thing ex-Leaf did right

TORONTO (CP) — Father Les Costello, a former member of Toronto Maple Leafs, is recovering after being lost in the bush of northern Ontario for 28 hours while participating in a hunting trip.

Costello, a member of the Flying Fathers, a hockey club that competes in charity games, is recovering in hospital in Timmins, Ont., with frostbitten feet.

"The best that could happen is that I lose the tips of three toes," Costello told Toronto Star columnist Milt Dunnell in a telephone interview on Tuesday. "The worst that could happen is that I lose more."

Costello, who played for the Leafs in 1947-48, described the ordeal as "one helluva an experience"

"I did everything wrong," he said of the hunting trip that took place last Thursday. "I left the camp with no matches, no compass and no food. Then I took the wrong trail."

Costello said he left the camp in the morning to hunt partridge and was expected back by lunch.

"Meanwhile, I'd managed to fall into a beaver swamp and got myself soaked," Costello said. "When I got out of that, I lost a boot while going down a creek. I had to have something on my foot, so I made myself a shoe out of my hunting bag. To help keep the foot warm, I put a partridge inside and walked on it. I got so hungry I ate part of the partridge raw. Wasn't bad."

Being a priest, did he ask for a little help, a little guidance?

"You're damn right I did," Costello said. "I got down on my knees and prayed to St. Martin de Porres, my favorite saint. What I sair was: 'If you want me to continue in your work of helping the poor, get me the hell out of here.'

"I had no more than scrambled back to my feet than I heard two shots," he said. "I immediately fired two answering shots and waited for them to come and get me."

Spend a little time on those outboards

Although some die-hards stay afloat throughout the year, numerous fishermen keep their boats on dry land during the winter.

So, with the leaves fast falling from the trees, now might be a good time for some tips on winterizing and storing your outboard motor.

Looking after your motor now will help eliminate problems that could be forgotten during the coming months. It will also help you take to the water with a minimum of preparation in the spring.

A stabilizer and conditioner should be added to any unused gasoline in the fuel tank. These products help keep the fuel fresh, preventing gum and varnish deposits in the fuel system by absorbing moisture in the gasoline, and protect tank parts from corrosion.

With your rig still in the water, remove the cowl or wraparound and warm up the motor. Disconnect the fuel line while the engine is idling and inject a storage sealant into the carburator air intake. As the carb (or carbs) begin to run dry, fire in an extra dose.

This process will distribute the protective compound throughout the crankcase and cylinder block to stop internal corrosion and use up fuel in the carburators to prevent formation of gum and varnish.

Make sure all the drain holes in the gear housing are open. If there is a flushing plug, remove it to make sure all the water is drained out.

Trapped water can freeze and crack the gear or water pump housings.

Then remove the air vent screw and grease filler plug, along with the washers, on the gear housing. Insert a tube of the proper lubricant (as indicated in the manual) into the filler hole and inject new gear oil until the old oil starts to flow out of the vent hole. If there is any water discharge, it could be mean some serious trouble. Don't forget to replace the screws and plugs.

After removing the propeller, clean the shaft with steel wool and apply some silicone grease before reinstalling it.

Wipe the entire exterior surface of the motor and spray with a corrosion preventative.

Clean the battery, apply some petroleum jelly to the posts and charge it. Check the charge every couple of months and recharge if necessary. This is particularly important if the battery is to be stored in a cold location. It's likely to freeze if the specific gravity of the electrolyte falls too low.

Cover and store the motor in a clean dry location, making sure there is enough ventilation to prevent the buildup of moisture.

The foregoing operation may seem a little involved, but the value of any size of outboard these days makes the time, care and labor a good investment.

Anyone who isn't a do-it-yourselfer can have the same operation carried out by a dealer.

The provincial Forest Service has slapped a six-month moratorium on development on South Moresby Island, blocking any plans by Rayonier of Canada to expand logging.

The moratorium, however, can't be extended and a proper land use plan has to be in place before the time runs out.

A meeting is scheduled for next Tuesday among the interested government agencies and provincial Environment Minister Rafe Mair is expected to take a helicopter tour of the disputed area next week.

Flanagan wins Cy Young

MIKE FLANAGAN
. . . best pitcher in AL

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mike Flanagan picked up an effective changeup delivery, learned how to deal with the news media and wound up as the American League's Cy Young Award winner.

The 27-year-old left-hander, who posted a 23-9 record for Baltimore's league champions, was a runaway winner.

He had 136 points under a system which allows five points for first place, three for second and one for third.

"I'll always look at the award as a team thing," said Flanagan, the fifth Orioles pitcher in 11 years years to win or share the honor.

"Maybe I was the best pitcher," Flanagan said while noting the Orioles won 108 games in regular and post-season play, "but I was also on the best team."

Flanagan credited teammate Scott McGregor with turning his season around by teaching him a changeup.

From July 9 on, Flanagan won 13 of 16 regular-season decisions, turning in a 2.23 earned-run average over 18 starts. He finished fourth in the AL with a 3.08 ERA.

In addition to leading the major leagues in victories, he shared the league lead with five shutouts, was second with 38 starts, and third with 190 strikeouts and 265 2-3 innings pitched.

"The hardest thing about the World Series was dealing with the press," Flanagan said. "I told my dad I had to answer the same question 75 times."

"He told me, 'I'm not worried about you pitching to the Pirates, so don't you worry about the press,'."

Flanagan won the opening game of the Series, lost game No. 5, and then faced one batter in the ninth inning of final game.

"That was the hardest time I ever had trying to pitch," Flanagan said of the seventh game. "I didn't find out until 10 minutes before the game that my wife was all right."

Flanagan's wife Kathy collapsed at home on the morning of the deciding game, and subsequently underwent 2½ hours of surgery for appendicitis and accompanying internal bleeding.

Tommy John, 21-9 during the season with New York Yankees, was next with 51 points and last year's winner, Yankee Ron Guidry, 18-8 with a league-leading 2.78 ERA, was third at 26. Texas Rangers reliever Jim Kern was fourth with 25 points.

Ex-Steeler tries boxing

HOUSTON (AP) — Ernie Holmes, 296-pound former Pittsburgh Steelers defensive tackle, has announced that he is launching a professional boxing career with intentions of becoming the heavyweight champion.

Holmes, 29, who retired from the National Football League Steelers in 1978, said he does not have his first fight scheduled yet but would like to fight former Dallas NFL star Ed (Too Tall) Jones, who also has launched a boxing career.

National hockey final here

Six teams — newly-crowned Canada West University Athletic Association champion UVic Vikettes, Alberta, Manitoba, University of Toronto, York and Dalhousie — square off in three days of round-robin action starting Thursday for the Canadian intercollegiate women's field hockey championship.

Play starts at 10:15 a.m. Thursday and continues beginning at 8:15 a.m. Friday and Saturday, mostly at UVic's McCoy Field. The final is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Sunday at the same site. Windsor Park, which will be utilized for one match Friday and one Saturday, will be the backup pitch.

Vikettes, who breezed to the CWUAA title in Calgary last weekend, had an automatic bye into the national final as the host team. Alberta, which finished second, will fill the other CWUAA berth.

The UVic squad boasts numerous players who have served on both provincial and national representative sides.

"We're carrying 15 players into the tournament and Jenny (coach Jenny John) gets them all into our matches," said player Sarah Angus, who doubles as coach of the UVic Vikings men's team.

"We're versatile and most of us play more than one position," she added. "Most teams play a 5-3-2 with five forwards and two defenders, but Jenny uses a 5-4-1, with one sweeper playing deep. Lynne Deecroft and Rita Bruneski shore up our midfield, giving us great defence."

The tactic has produced such a strong defence that goalkeeper Sue Oliver has only had to handle an average of two or three shots per match.

"Our main problem has been getting the ball in the net," said John. "But I think that's been solved now."

"We haven't been pressured much by conference teams," she added.

Two of the visiting teams which could provide some of that missing pressure are Toronto and York.

Toronto has been a national finalist for the past two years and is coached by Liz Hoffman, who runs Ontario's national senior champions.

Horseman dies

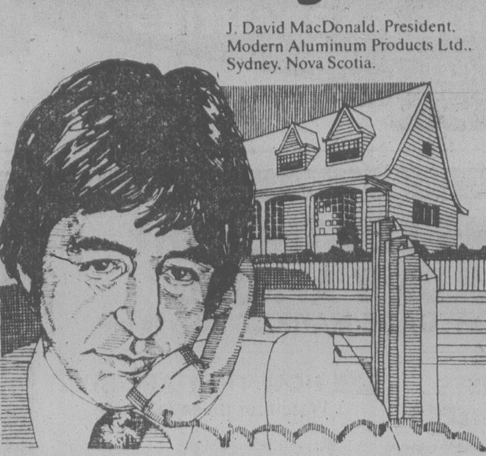
TORONTO (CP) — Harry J. Carmichael, a racehorse owner for almost 60 years and a member of the Ontario Jockey Club board of trustees, has died at 89.

On the move with RoyNat.

J. David MacDonald, President, Modern Aluminum Products Ltd., Sydney, Nova Scotia.



"RoyNat made the acquisition possible."

"I began practicing law in Toronto in 1971, and was still at it in Sydney in 1977-78 when I found out Modern Aluminum Products was for sale. It was a clean little company, making storm windows and doors and providing siding and insulation services. I didn't have any money, but I wanted that company. I wanted to get into my own business.

"I caught the next plane to Toronto to raise acquisition funds. Through my legal contacts I got to the sources quickly, but they weren't interested in the Maritimes. No go!

"Time was short. I had 30 days to raise the money. A chartered accountant I worked with suggested RoyNat.

"They were there within hours. They analyzed the deal, the business – and me. I got the go-ahead, and bought the company. It was incredible! Touch and go!

"Without RoyNat, the acquisition would have been impossible. No doubt about it."

Majority control of B.C. mining is in Canadian hands.

Foreign investment is important to B.C.'s mining industry, helping to develop new mines and create more jobs for British Columbians. But the dominant factor is still Canadian...with 55% of the control of B.C. mining operations in Canadian hands.* Mining development in B.C. is proceeding at a strong, steady rate...and it's happening in a way that benefits our province and our country.

Ivy's edge A's

Four players sank double figures as Ivy's tripped Victoria Athletics 70-66 in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game Monday at Central Junior High School.

Dave Morgan topped Ivy's with 16 points, Lorne Dakin added 15, Brian Sutherland-Brown chipped in 13 and Grant Boland struck for 10.

Vikes, Birds tie

University of Victoria Vikings and University of British Columbia Thunderbirds, both out of the running for the Canada West University Athletic Association men's soccer crown, battled to a scoreless deadlock Tuesday at UVic.

The defending-champion Vikings finished in third place with a 3-1-4 record behind first-place Alberta Golden Bears and runner-up Calgary Dinosaurs.

Thunderbirds placed fifth at 2-5-1.

CALHOUN ELECTED

FREDERICTON (CP) — Bob Calhoun of Fredericton has been elected president of the Canadian Oldtimers' Hockey Association.

HAPPY TROTTER is Vince Humphrey, who is scheduled to be in action with Harlem Globetrotters when famed basketball tourists pay annual visit to Victoria Friday night. Expected to again combine humor with their remarkable basketball skills, Trotters, now in 53rd season, will play exhibition game against another touring squad at 8 p.m. in Memorial Arena. Other entertainment on program will be provided by variety acts. Tickets are available at arena box office and at Hillside Mall.

Tyees may cause Spectrum problem

Victoria Tyees, who applied a tight grip on second place by dropping Reynolds Roadrunners 1-0 Tuesday, are in a position to determine the fate of Spectrum's hopes of gaining fourth place and the final playoff berth in the first division of the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League.

Spectrum could only manage a 1-1 tie with Oak Bay, leaving both teams tied for fourth spot. Oak Bay (6-6-1) has completed its schedule and Spectrum (5-4-3) has one match remaining — at home to the Tyees on Friday.

A win or tie would put Spectrum in the playoffs. If Tyees win, Spectrum and Oak Bay will meet in a special playoff.

Unbeaten Mt. Douglas Thistles, idle Tuesday, have already clinched first place.

In second division matches, Esquimalt Dockers rallied from a 2-1 half-time deficit to drop Belmont 3-2 and Claremont Spartans tripped Stelly's Stingers, 5-1.

Dan Hammick fired three goals to lead the Claremont attack while singles were added by Paul DePaoli and James Christensen. Mike Vale averted a shutout for Stingers.

"I could have shopped around: I didn't, because I know the lending market, and I know them!"

"I've been in the diesel business for 40 years and involved with several construction projects, so I'm familiar with all sources of financing. Therefore, when we at Cullen Detroit Diesel needed a multi-million dollar long-term loan for an expansion of our truck service facilities at Surrey, B.C., I called RoyNat direct.

"I know their rates are competitive. I know their style of doing business. I like both.

"Since I bought the company five years ago, we've more than doubled in size, with 12 branches providing parts and service throughout B.C. for GM diesel engines and Allison automatic transmissions and gas turbine generators.

"RoyNat provided the bulk of the funds for all our expansions".

Bristol holds Forest to draw

LONDON (Reuter) — European soccer champion Nottingham Forest was held to a 1-1 draw by host club Bristol City in Tuesday's fourth round of the English League Cup.

Forest, bidding to win the domestic soccer trophy for the third successive time, went ahead when John O'Hare scored in the 29th minute but an 86th-minute equalizer by defender Gerry Sweeney gave Bristol City a replay.

League champion Liverpool struggled for much of its home tie against Third Division Exeter City, but finally improved and won 2-0. David Fairclough broke the deadlock in the 62nd minute with a header and sealed Liverpool's place in the quarter-finals with a second goal in the final minute.

Everton, wasn't as fortunate because Third Division Grimsby recovered from a goal deficit and won 2-1. Grimsby's hero was Mike Brolley who struck twice soon after Brian Kidd put Everton ahead in the 24th minute.

Ken Hibbitt scored in the second minute of injury time to give Wolverhampton Wanderers a lucky 1-1 draw against Queen's Park Rangers. Clive Allen, the leading scorer in the Second Division, shot the London First Division Wolves a replay they hardly deserved.

India just misses win

CALCUTTA (Reuter) — India failed by 47 runs to win the fifth cricket test Wednesday against Australia despite a dashing 85 not out in the closing stages by Yashpal Shama.

Instead, the match ended in a draw, leaving India 1-0 ahead with the last match in the six-test series scheduled to begin in Bombay Saturday.

India had 245 minutes to score 247 runs, but Australia also had an opportunity of bowling out the opposition. Spinner Geoff Dymock kept alive Australian chances after lunch when he grabbed the key wickets of Sunil Gavaskar, Dilip Vengsarkar and Gundappa Vishwanath.

Als open gate for Green in shot at rushing record

MONTREAL (CP) — Running back David Green will be given every opportunity to shatter Willie Burden's Canadian Football League rushing mark when Montreal Alouettes conclude their regular season on Sunday.

"Coach Scannella has advised me that I would play the whole game,'' said Green, who has rushed for 1,681 yards this season but needs 216 yards against Hamilton Tiger-Cats to set the record.

"I told him I thought it was a good opportunity and he might get the record," Scannella said. "He's got a chance at it. It's a lot of yards but he's done it before."

Green hasn't exactly reached that total before but he has run for 206 and 212 yards in games against Toronto Argonauts this season.

Even if the powerful halfback fails to shatter a record, he has already surpassed the goal of 1,600 yards that he set for himself at the start of the season.

"I'm not really trying to break Burden's record," he said, "although if I get the opportunity to play the whole game I'll do my very best."

Like the rest of the Alouettes, however, Green is more preoccupied with defeating Hamilton, which has suddenly become a serious threat to Montreal's Grey Cup aspirations.

The Tiger-Cats have clinched third place and will face Ottawa Rough Riders in the Eastern Conference semi-final to determine which team meets first-place Montreal.

"I don't think the players want to take a pre-season approach to the Tiger-Cats," said Scannella.

TAXES AND PROVINCIAL GRANTS

Here are two ways to reduce taxes.

We recall how Victoria and other municipalities with Provincial government land and buildings within their boundaries fought and won the battle for grants in lieu of taxes. We must do the same for Provincial University lands and buildings in Oak Bay. The increase in revenue from such a grant would be substantial.

Again, if the Province would grant us aid to reduce our per capita policing costs to those in R.C.M.P. policed municipalities, our municipal budget could be cut. Such a grant is proposed by the Provincial Task Force on Policing. It's time it was given to us.

If elected as your Mayor I will fight for both these grants.

Lions launch shakeup

VANCOUVER (CP) — Import defensive end Drew Taylor was released Tuesday as British Columbia Lions began a late-season shakeup in an attempt to end their three-game Canadian Football League losing streak.

Taylor was in his second season with the Lions and had led the team in quarterback sacks earlier in the season.

Coach Vic Rapp didn't immediately add another import to the active roster, although it was anticipated that Richard Murray would play here Saturday against Edmonton Eskimos in the last game of the regular-season schedule.

"If there are guys on this club who don't care anymore, then we want to know who they are," said Rapp. "If some people are saying Saturday's game is a meaningless contest, they're wrong.

"It certainly means something to us. Obviously we've got to re-establish a winning pattern. But it's also a time of player evaluation for the coaches in looking ahead to next year."

Murray played the first four games of the season.

'Phoney bilinguals' still at 30%

OTTAWA (CP) — Almost 30 per cent of the public servants whose jobs are designated bilingual do not have sufficient knowledge of a second official language to meet their job requirements.

Figures supplied Tuesday by Perrin Beatty, minister of state for the treasury board, show that the federal government has made no progress during the last two years in placing bilingual persons in jobs demanding knowledge of both French and English.

Beatty, who is responsible for bilingualism programs in the public service, tabulated the figures at the request of Liberal MP Hal Herbert (Vaudreuil).

According to the statistics, 55,985 jobs designated as bilingual were filled as of March 30, 1979, but 16,532 of these federal employees "did not meet the language requirements" of their jobs.

The figures are almost identical to those supplied two years ago by the public service commission, the federal agency which hires and fires government employees.

The 1977 figures show that 52,269 jobs designated as bilingual were filled but 16,358 of these persons had insufficient knowledge of both official languages to carry out their duties.

The linguistically deficient public servants in 1979 included 10,095 English-Canadians and 6,437 French-Canadians.

"Of this 16,532, there were 14,953 employees or 90.4 per cent (8,825 anglophones and 6,128 francophones) who were exempted from meeting the language requirements of their positions because of incumbents' rights, long service or age entitlements," Beatty said in a letter to Herbert.

Translated, that statement means these 16,532 employees are cemented in their jobs despite their deficient language skills.

"The remaining 1,579 employees or 9.6 per cent (1,270 anglophones and 309 francophones) were appointed to bilingual positions on the condition that they undertake language training in order to meet the language requirements of their positions," Beatty wrote.

The minister also wrote that 47,271 public servants in Canada receive the annual $800 bilingual bonus.

The former Liberal government wanted to gradually eliminate the bonus but public servants threatened during the election campaign to speak only one language on the job and the bonus was extended indefinitely.

Prime Minister Clark said recently it has not been decided if his government will also attempt to end the bonus.

Max Yalden, official languages commissioner and an opponent of the bilingual bonus, said in his last annual report to Parliament that the federal government paid $5.6 million in bonuses to employees who were not bilingual.

The problem occurs mainly among English-Canadian public servants, who according to Yalden are "phoney bilinguals" incapable of discussing in French last night's hockey game.

Canada's foreign aid to be cut back

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada will reduce its foreign aid budget by $90 million in the coming year, Senator Martial Asselin, minister responsible for the Canadian International Development Agency, said Tuesday.

Senator Asselin told reporters that the Treasury Board has accepted his plan for tightening control over CIDA finances, and added that 16 more civil servants have been hired for this task.

Despite the cutback, he said more aid will be directed to non-governmental agencies, rather than bi-lateral, or government-to-government aid.

The 1978-79 budget is $1.16 billion, of which $71 million went to non-government agencies, both Canadian and international, Asselin said earlier in a luncheon speech to the French Chamber of Commerce in Canada.

A new CIDA policy is to provide $250,000 to consulting firms to prepare bids for United Nations aid program contracts.

The senator complained that Canada receives an insufficient share of contracts handed out by the United Nations Development Program.

The program — which includes the Food and Agriculture Organization, World Bank and World Health Organization — distributed a total of $434 million, of which $37 million, or 6.2 per cent, came from Canada.

However, Asselin said, out of $41 million worth of consulting contracts, Canadian firms got only $1.3 million worth, or three per cent. Japanese firms got the lion's share, he said.

Foreign aid with strings attached — where the receiving country spends at least part of its aid on Canadian-made goods and services — represent more than half of Canadian foreign aid, Asselin said.

The senator said that Canada has annulled $20 million of debts to countries which receive Canadian aid. Third world countries owe Canada large sums of money, he said, but would not say how much.

Asselin told the businessmen that aid from rich to poor countries will help reduce international tensions, and added that CIDA recently accorded $5 million to help feed Cambodian refugees.

Accused seeing crawlies as jury weighs her sanity

CALGARY (CP) — A bizarre sex-murder trial in Court of Queen's Bench was interrupted Tuesday after one of the accused said she was seeing bugs or worms crawling on her jacket.

Fife is charged with second-degree murder along with transvestite homosexual Douglas Gee, 21, in the beating death and burning of Calgary businessman David Powley, 46, last November.

The jury decided Fife was fit to continue despite testimony from a forensic psychiatrist and an RCMP matron.

Psychiatrist J. E. Arboleda-Flores said he examined Fife Monday after the court heard an RCMP tape of Fife describing how she, Gee and another man, Paul Racs, beat Powley to death with bottles and a lamp.

Arboleda-Florez said that under pressure, Fife would withdraw inside herself, hallucinate and hear voices.

In his opinion, Fife was unable to assist in her defence by reason of insanity.

The psychiatrist was called in to examine Fife by lawyer Michael Starr, who also called on RCMP matron Kathryn McConnell, who attended Fife Monday and heard her talking to her mother.

"She said she could see the brains scattered around the room and the squiggly things and they were making her sick," said McConnell.

The trial continues.

Assistant drowned to save priest

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — A Roman Catholic priest who survived the sinking of a bus in 15 metres of water told a hushed courtroom here Tuesday that his young seminarian assistant let himself drown rather than jeopardize the priest's chances of swimming to safety.

Rev. Gaston St. Jean said 23-year-old Raymond Cloutier, a non-swimmer, let go of his arm and disappeared beneath the surface of Lac d'Argent after the priest tried unsuccessfully to tow him to shore.

The lake, located in the nearby village of Eastman, 100 kilometres east of Montreal, was the scene of Canada's worst-ever traffic accident on Aug. 4, 1978. A bus rocketed down a steep winding road and belly-flopped into the lake, drowning 40 mostly handicapped adults from the Asbestos area.

The priest was testifying at the trial of bus owner Gilles Bolduc, 37, charged with criminal negligence in connection with the accident. A coroner's inquest last year found the crash was the result of a faulty braking system.

Describing himself as a weak swimmer, St. Jean, 54, said he tried vainly to keep Cloutier afloat. "He (Cloutier) stopped struggling and I kept his head afloat, but as I did it my own head went under."

"We can't both make it," St. Jean quoted Cloutier as saying before the young man let go of his arm and disappeared.

St. Jean testified earlier Tuesday that "an uncontrollable fear spread like electricity" among the passengers when the bus landed on the surface of the lake.

"The first reaction when the bus hit the surface of the lake was surprise. Then it turned to stupor and eventually it became panic."

St. Jean remained in his seat until the panic reached a fever pitch.

"At that point, I went up to talk to the driver. There was no water in the bus at that time and I estimate that we were afloat for about 15 minutes.

"The driver told me he thought the wheels were touching the bottom and there was no need to be excited."

But St. Jean said water then began seeping into the bus and soon covered his ankles.

St. Jean said he then escaped from the bus by squeezing through one of the bus windows.

As he did so, he noticed the bus was sinking and the sound of water began drowning out the cries of passengers seated at the rear.

Another of the seven survivors, 25-year-old Alain Pouliot, testified the bus brake pressure gauge read zero as the vehicle trundled down the hill.

Prisoners to get pay hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay raises for prisoners are just around the corner, says commissioner D. R. Yeomans of the correctional Institute of Canada.

He told the Commons justice committee Tuesday that prisoners now receive between $1 and $2.05 for a day's work in such trades as making playground equipment and bags for postmen.

Starting next April 1, a new pay plan revolving around minimum wages paid in the provinces will go into effect, he said.

But money isn't everything to the prisoners.

Yeomans said other work incentives, such as remission of sentences and temporary absences, were favored as part of the pay package.

While most prisoners receive their pay pittances, others such as those in Springhill, N.S., fare much better.

They are employed by the Scott Paper Co. in a reforestation program made necessary by Nova Scotia's budworm problem.

Yeomans said the prisoners are paid "the going rate" by the paper company and that he hopes to interest other large companies in hiring prisoners on the same terms.

Bruce Halliday (PC — Oxford) said he is concerned that the correctional service not provide unfair competition to two large companies making playground equipment.

Halliday wondered whether the service couldn't work out a deal to allow one of the companies to handle sales and administration of the prison wares.

Yeomans said he would be pleased to look into the suggestion.

Tory information bill weakened by exceptions

OTTAWA (CP) — Even if the government's freedom of information bill becomes law, Canadians will be getting much less information than Americans now do under a similar U.S. legislation.

A comparison of the Canadian and American legislation shows the American law allows far fewer exceptions to the general principle that government files should be open to public inspection.

Drafters of the Canadian bill tabled in the Commons last week were able to use the American law — passed in 1966 and strengthened considerably in 1974 — as a model.

In some ways the Canadian version is an improvement, says David Vladeck, director of the Freedom of Information Clearing-house in Washington, D.C.

He applauds the Canadian proposal to have a type of ombudsman, called an information commissioner, review government refusals of requests for information before cases could go to court.

Murray Rankin, a law professor at the University of Victoria, agrees. He calls the Progressive Conservative bill "a solid piece of work. The structures are here to allow us the best legislation in the world."

But both men agree that the more than 50 exemptions in the bill subvert the government's announced intention to allow citizens greater access to its files.

'I could go through this bill and tell you how I could launder information and get around every provision in it," says Tim Ingram, staff director for the U.S. congressional committee that monitors the U.S. Freedom of Information Act.

Privy Council President Walter Baker has said this is merely the government's first word on the subject. He promised the government will be receptive to changes in the exemptions.

Like the Canadian bill, the American law established the principle that taxpayers have the right to know what the government is doing with their money.

But the American law contains only nine, crisply-worded exceptions to this principle, whereas the Canadian bill includes five pages of detailed exceptions.

Most criticism by opposition parties, freedom-of-information advocates and journalists has been aimed at the provision which would allow the government to keep secret almost all information related to national security and law enforcement.

"There is no need for these sections to be so broadly worded," says Vladeck. "They give the government enormous discretion to withhold information."

The American law allows the FBI and the secret service to keep files secret only if disclosure would do specific harm — such as endanger a policeman's life or reveal the identify of a police informer.

The RCMP would be able to shield its files from public scrutiny under the Canadian bill simply by saying they related to law enforcement.

The American law also lists seven very specific types of defence information the Pentagon can keep secret, while the Canadian bill contains 31 broadly-worded exemptions for documents about defence and foreign relations.

The Canadian bill also regards relations between the federal government and the provinces as sancrosanct. The federal government must — not may — refuse to release any informatvon that was obtained from a province "in confidence under an agreement or arrangement."

Critics argue that almost any kind of information could be smuggled in under this section.

American officials say the states never asked for any similar protection under the U.S. law.

The reason for the different approaches to exemptions is the different judicial traditions in the two countries, Canadian government officials say.

In the United States, where courts take an active role in interpreting and expanding the law, legislators "relied on judicial gloss (to be) placed on the acts by court cases," says Vladeck.

"The initial premise was that the courts would plug the gaps in the act."

In Canada, where the courts interpret laws very narrowly, "we felt the courts needed more direction" in the form of very specific exemptions, says Tim Ralfe, special adviser to Baker on freedom of information.

Freedom-of-information advocates regard the American law as superior to the Conservative government's proposals on several other scores:

— Charges for searching for and photocopying documents would appear to be higher in Canada. Charges are waived in most U.S. cases.

— American departments must reply to requests for information within 10 days. Canadian bureaucrats would get 30 days.

Blackmail forced Clark decision, Israel group says

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government's decision to drop plans to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem was made "under monumental pressure, threats and blackmail," the national chairman of the Canada-Israel Committee said Tuesday.

In a news release, Harold Buchwald said the decision not to move the embassy from Tel Aviv, announced in the House of Commons on Monday, "does not auger well for the future."

"Blackmail is only effective when the victim demonstrates his susceptibility and this is the unfortunate position in which Canada now finds itself."

Strong protests from Arab countries, including threats of economic retaliation, followed Prime Minister Clark's original proposal made last spring to move the embassy. Clark appointed former Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield to look into the question and Stanfield urged the government to reverse its stand.

Buchwald said the policy reversal had given encouragement to Arab extremists seeking "through threats and arm twisting" to torpedo the peace process. The decision meant that Canada's capacity to chart an independent course of foreign policy in the Middle East may have been seriously jeopardized, he said.

The Canada-Israel Committee represents major national Jewish organizations on matters pertaining to Middle East public affairs.

Truscott case probe unlikely

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said Tuesday he doubts that the murder conviction of Stephen Truscott will be re-examined.

McMurtry said in an interview that officials from his ministry are looking at information in a book released this week which says Truscott was innocent of the murder and rape of 12-year-old Lynn Harper in Clinton, Ont., 20 years ago.

The review should be finished within a week, he said, adding he is skeptical it will result in the case being reopened.

Truscott was 14 when he was convicted of the crime. In Ottawa, Prime Minister Joe Clark said Monday that he will ask the justice department to decide whether the case should be reopened.

Canada raises U.S. oil price

OTTAWA (CP) — Export charges on shipments of heavy oil to the United States will increase to $16.70 a barrel in November, up $2 a barrel from the October level, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn announced Tuesday.

The increase is in response to rising price levels of competing crude oils in U.S. markets, the energy minister said.

There will be no increase in the export charge for light crude oil from $16.00 a barrel in October. The government cut back light crude exports to 14,000 barrels a day in October because of increased domestic demand. The previous level was 55,000 barrels a day.

Increases were also announced for a range of petroleum products exported to the U.S.

Shipments of motor gasoline will rise to $13.25 a barrel from $12.60; heavy fuel oil exports will increase to $10 a barrel, up 40 cents; and middle distillates will be raised to $14.75 from $13.10 in October.

Airline warned after dark takeoff

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Republic Airlines of Minneapolis, Minn., has been told it will lose its Canadian operating licence if an action taken by the crew of one of its planes in Thunder Bay last week is repeated.

A transport department spokesman in Winnipeg confirmed Tuesday that a Republic Airlines DC-9 jetliner took off from an unlit runway at Thunder Bay airport during the early morning of Oct. 23.

"Republic has been advised in writing that this action was in contravention of air regulations," said Ian Taylor of the transport office in Winnipeg.

The lights were not turned on because of the strike by airport radio operators, who are required to perform essential services during strikes.

$4-a-year oil price hikes look sound to computer

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada foresees a drop in the unemployment rate to 5.6 per cent by 1982 and a decline in the inflation rate to 8.6 per cent if the government implements its mortgage tax program and moves the country to world oil prices by the mid-1980s.

The projections are in the council's 16th annual review released today.

The forecast, council chairman Sylvia Ostry said at a press conference, is the product of the most sophisticated computer analysis and the largest research budget available to any forecasting organization in the country.

Nevertheless, computer projections can never take into account all the imponderable influences which could play a major role in the country's economic future, she said.

Assuming no change in monetary and fiscal policy and a $4-per-barrel annual increase in the price of oil until 1986, the council offers the following predictions:

— Prices will rise at an annual rate of 8.6 per cent until 1982 and a rate of 8.8 per cent between 1982 and 1985. Last month the cost of living rose at a 12-month rate of 9.6 per cent.

— The level of economic growth, measured by the annual increase in the country's output of all goods and services, will increase by 4.2 per cent until 1982 and 3.3 per cent between 1982 and 1985. The government expects growth of about three per cent this year.

— Real wages (what the average person earns after inflation is taken into account) will go up by 0.8 per cent until 1982 and 2.4 per cent between 1982 and 1985.

— The unemployment rate will drop to 5.6 per cent for the period ending 1982 and fall further to 4.8 per cent for the subsequent three-year period.

The council also programmed its computer to show what would happen if the country remained on the existing oil price path, which calls for a $2-a-barrel increase each year. The savings at the gas pump and in home heating bills led to a more moderate rate of inflation of 7.4 per cent by 1982. However, the unemployment rate was 6.3 per cent.

A second scenario was put into the computer in which oil prices were raised by $7 per barrel a year, bringing Canada to world prices by 1982. If the government were to choose this course of action, the inflation rate between now and 1982 would be 9.4 per cent and unemployment would be 5.8 per cent.

The council does not recommend such an abrupt increase in energy prices because it would jolt the economy to a degree unprecedented in the country's history.

Many economists think Canada should move to world oil prices as rapidly as possible, giving the economy a large once-and-for-all shock, Ostry said.

"But if you rev up the system to world prices by 1982, that strikes us at the council as a very risky path with a sharp injection of inflation into the system and a sharp impact on real income."

Crosbie's fight-inflation claims fail to move opposition critics

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Crosbie says he wants to reduce inflation in Canada to 4 or 5 per cent but to do so Canadians will have to lower their economic expectations, perhaps for several years.

Crosbie, testifying Tuesday before the House of Commons Finance Committee, said every 1-per-cent rise in interest rates boosted unemployment by 0.25 per cent, but these "side effects" were unavoidable if he was to achieve his goal of lowering inflation, now at 9.6 per cent to 4 or 5 per cent.

"I hope that individual Canadians accept the fact that for a while we are going to have to accept less then we want," Crosbie told reporters.

"There will have to be a lessening of expectations in the next few months or the next several years until this government brings inflation under control."

Liberal finance critic Herb Gray said the high rates were hurting small businessmen, farmers and consumers.

"Mr. Crosbie is being heartless and uncaring while wrapping it in concern for providing short term answers," he said.

In defending the recent interest increases, Crosbie said he will try to protect low- and middle-income wage earners and high unemployment areas from the "severe side effects of the rising interest rates," in his budget, expected in the next several weeks.

New Democratic Party and Social Credit spokesmen joined the Liberals Tuesday in attacking current interest rates and dismissing the hearing as a pointless charade.

New Democrat Bob Rae said "the prime minister said they (the Conservatives) were prepared to listen to serious alternatives, but every time we try to suggest one, it becomes clear they've already rejected it or don't plan to explore it."

Fresh produce slows food rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Food prices rose slightly between September and October, helped by lower prices for fresh and processed fruit and poultry, the agriculture department said today.

The department's monthly food-at-home index increased by 0.2 per cent from Sept. 14 to Oct. 19 and is 13 per cent higher than a year ago.

The cost of a diet to meet the nutritional requirements of a family of four was $61.12 a week in October, a drop of 24 cents from September.

The department says its survey of food prices in 12 cities showed that beef prices have stabilized and no major price changes are anticipated.

Pork prices are expected to be lower. Higher-than-usual amounts of chicken and turkey in storage should mean lower prices for those products. Chicken stocks are 124 per cent higher than last year while turkey supplies are 31 per cent greater than a year earlier.

The survey showed that prices for dairy products, canned tuna and salmon and fresh and frozen fish and eggs were all higher.

Fresh fruit prices dropped 12.8 per cent even though the domestic apple crop is lower than last year's. Increased storage charges may result in high apple prices later.

With the return to cold weather, fresh vegetable prices rose 8.9 per cent in October after dropping 23.2 per cent in August and 9.5 per cent in September.

But prices for potatoes, onions and carrots declined slightly. However, export demand for Canadian potatoes may push up their domestic price.

The faux pas that refreshes

ROBERTSON
. . . 'I finally did it'

TORONTO (CP) — Lloyd Robertson finally did it.

The chief anchorman for CTV-TV news signed off the 11 p.m. broadcast with the words: "I'm Lloyd Robertson for CBC-CTV news."

Robertson, chief newsreader with the CBC for six years until he quit in September, 1976, to join CTV, chuckled over his faux pas with co-anchorman Harvey Kirk, bid his audience goodnight and said:

"I finally did it."

No pox shots

TORONTO (CP) — Since smallpox has been wiped off the face of the earth, Ontario has decided to stop vaccinations to prevent it.

Health Minister Dennis Timbrell told the Ontario Hospital Association on Tuesday that there has not been a case of smallpox in Ontario since 1962.

The World Health Organization said last week the disease, a major health problem in Canada in the early part of the century, has been eradicated.

Timbrell said supplies of smallpox vaccine will be stockpiled in London, Atlanta and Moscow in case of future outbreaks.

Women facing poverty

WINNIPEG (CP) — Housewives and other women who don't have regular, paying jobs will likely live out old age in poverty, Doris Anderson, president of the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women said Tuesday.

"Three of every four women who are single, divorced or widowed and who are over 65, wind up living on less than $5,000 a year," Ms. Anderson said at a news conference.

"There are three times as many women in poverty than men," she said. Ms. Anderson was in Winnipeg to visit the council's regional offices while on a western speaking tour.

She said a major task in the next decade will be ensuring that women receive equal pay to men for work of equal value.

She said women earn, on average, 61 cents for every dollar paid to men. "They (women) don't earn enough to provide for themselves in their old age."

She said the council will also continue to press for Canada Pension Plan coverage for housewives, as recommended in the 1970 report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women.

"I don't know how it would work," Ms. Anderson said. "It's up to the government to see that it does work."

She gave qualified praise to the New Democratic Party for offering more to women and being more willing to field women candidates than other major political groups.

But, she said, even the NDP gives women short shrift when it sees a chance to take power. "In Saskatchewan, in the last election, when the NDP was almost certain to win, they didn't run a single woman."

Before the judge

A 19-year-old who broke into a locker room and stole empty beer and pop bottles was given a 30-day jail sentence Tuesday in provincial court.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Clark entered the storage locker belonging to another tenant in the house where he and his girlfriend lived and removed cases of empty bottles. Clark took them to a bottle exchange and received $25 for them, Laughton said.

Clark had a criminal record which included convictions for theft under $200 and breaking and entering in Hamilton, and possession of stolen property in Victoria. He was given a two-month jail term for breaking and entering on March 31, 1978, and also placed on two years probation, and was fined $200 for possession of stolen property on Dec. 18 last year and placed on 18 months probation at that time.

A 20-year-old who wrecked a friend's sports car was given a suspended sentence, six months probation, and 60 hours of community service work by Judge William Ostler.

Guy Lorne Prevost, 967 Guy Place, was charged with dangerous driving.

Chris Kehler, a law student acting for the Crown, told the court Prevost was driving the car about 4:30 p.m. April 27 when he failed to round a right-turn curve while heading north on Elk Lake Drive at high speed.

Prevost's vehicle crossed a double-solid line and slammed into a van which had just made a turn from the Pat Bay Highway on to Elk Lake Drive. Three persons, including the sports car owner who was a passenger in his own vehicle, were taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital with minor injuries.

Prevost told police he had been drinking.

Another 20-year-old who produced a driver's licence he found was given a 30-day, intermittent sentence.

Laughton said Esquimalt police noticed Scott's vehicle about 12:30 a.m. Oct. 7 because it was on the wrong side of Craigflower.

After he produced a licence in the name of Kormansek, Scott finally admitted he was driving under suspension.

He was convicted June 8 of impaired driving and was fined $400.

Judge Alder also imposed a $50 fine after Scott pleaded guilty to driving without due care and attention.

Fined $400 for having care and control of a vehicle while impaired was 30-year-old Brian Edward Kimberley, 2522 Millhill.

Robert John Maltby, 55, of 1512 Fell, was fined $450 for having care and control of a vehicle while having a blood-alcohol reading of over .08.

A 40-year-old man who pleaded guilty to his second drinking-driving offence in just over 18 months was given a 14-day jail term by Allan.

Claude Robert Wyman, of the Madalon C docked at Fisherman's Wharf, pleaded guilty to impaired driving Oct. 16.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Wyman was stopped at about 1:30 a.m. after he had collided with a tow truck on Esquimalt Road near Catherine. The tow truck driver pursued Wyman's vehicle until Head and Dunsmuir. Subsequent breath test readings of .23 and .20 were obtained by Esquimalt police, Laughton said.

Candidates meet slated

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce has scheduled an all-candidates meeting for those running for mayor in the city on Nov. 14, three days before the election.

It will be held at noon at the Empress Hotel.

Trafficker gets break for last time

One man was told in county court Tuesday he was getting a break and another was told to smarten up.

The comments were made by B.C. Supreme Court Justice Harry McKay, sitting as a judge in county court, to George Hamilton August and Mark Millard Cook, both 22.

August was found guilty and Cook pleaded guilty to trafficking a quarter-ounce of marijuana for $25 to an undercover policewoman on Feb. 1.

Cook was told by McKay he was getting a break and hoped he realized it.

"He will probably not get a break if he steps over the bounds again," he said.

Cook was fined $250, in default 30 days in jail, ordered to perform 20 hours of community work service and placed on probation for two years with the condition that he perform the work service and keep away from the Bastion Inn.

McKay told August that in view of his criminal record he had no alternative but to send him to jail for four months. He took into account three months already spent in custody on this offence.

"It is time young man you realized that unless you change your ways you will spend a good part of your young adult life in jail," he said.

August's record includes three convictions for breaking and entering and theft; causing a disturbance by being drunk; theft; taking an auto without the owner's consent; possession of marijuana; and trafficking $6 worth of marijuana.

"The show must go on!" says New York producer Joseph Papp — but, he concedes with something a bit less volatile than brandy for the last act. Papp is staging The Art of Dining — a play involving actual preparation of a full course dinner. Gastronomic delight prevailed — until the crepes suzette were served. When an actor poured brandy to flame the dessert, the flame climbed right up into the bottle, which exploded. Suzanne Collins, George Guidall and Dianne Weist all were slightly burned. Says Papp, "We're going to keep the crepes suzette in — but without the brandy."

A $90,000 project to investigate the mysteries of vegetarianism qualifies the U.S. agriculture department for a Golden Fleece Award, says Senator William Proxmire. Runner up was spending of $65,000 "to develop psychological profiles of nutrition enthusiasts" so more might be learned about "nutrition behavior and motivation." A third possibility was a quest for the gasless bean. "That could have involved considerable fun, but further checking on our part disclosed that the (bean) research had considerable nutritional as well as aesthetic merit," Proxmire said.

Onassis

A presidential pucker ran afoul of northern niceties, says historian Arthur Schlesinger. Earlier this month at the dedication of the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston, Jimmy Carter planted a friendly kiss on Jackie Onassis' cheek. Schlesinger, an adviser to the late president, says Mrs. Onassis was annoyed apparently because "in the north, gentlemen do not kiss ladies on such brief acquaintance."

While in Shaker Heights, Ohio on her Royal Opera House fund-raising tour, Princess Margaret was handed a bit of North Americana in the form of two bumper stickers marked "Thank God I'm British" and "Thank God I'm English" respectively. "Do you stick these somplace?" asked the 49-year-old princess, who is fifth in line to the throne. Florence Duncan, host of a British music program on WZAK, handled the explanation and Meg handed the stickers to a security guard. But they were not seen on the Rolls-Royce she used during her stay in Cleveland — her last stop before heading back to the U.K. after a much-publicized tour.

abby

Dear Abby:

I am four and a half years older than my husband. He's small in stature and has a baby face that makes him look years younger than he is. I, on the other hand, look my age, even though I work very hard at keeping my figure, selecting becoming, non-matronly clothes, and doing everything I can to look youthful.

In spite of all this, my husband hasn't aged a bit since we've been married (22 years), and many people have mistaken me for his mother. Recently, I was asked if our college-age son and my husband were both my sons!

So far, my husband hasn't overheard any of these remarks. We have good communication in other matters, but I haven't been able to bring myself to discuss this with him, or let him know how much it bothers me.

Believe me, I'm doing all I can to look youthful. Now all I need is a sharp, snappy answer ready for people who hurt me in this way. Can you help me? I've noticed that you can really turn a neat phrase, Abby. I need to be prepared the next time something like this happens.

No Sig

Dear No Sig:

I don't recommend a 'sharp, snappy answer' for those who inadvertently hurt you by speaking their minds. Prepare yourself by adopting a more realistic attitude. Face it, you are married to a baby-faced man who doesn't look his age, and could conceivably be mistaken for your son. Look at it this way: you must have had something very special to have captured a 'younger man,' so count your blessings and develop a tougher hide. (P.S. do discuss it with him. When sensitive matters are brought out in the open, they lose their sting.)

Dear Abby:

My father is over 85 but still sharp as a tack mentally, still works every day and is very active. The problem is that Papa drives a car. He shouldn't. He has a license to drive, but he is a danger on the streets.

His vision isn't very good (particularly at night) and I am worried sick that he might kill himself or some innocent person. I've tried to tell him he shouldn't drive, but he is a very proud man, and stubborn, too.

Any ideas on what to do about my problem?

Loves Papa

Dear Loves:

If you love Papa as you say you do, you will quietly report him to the superintendent of motor vehicles. They act on such reports to re-test any licensed driver who could be a hazard.

Confidential to No Name in New Ulm:

Constantly checking up on your good-looking husband may not make him more faithful — but it will make him more careful.

Pork roasts like this may be popular, but a succulent shank should not be overlooked for sweetness, says chef Claiborne

Shank lives in the shadows

craig claiborne

The old chestnut that says 'the closer to the bone, the sweeter the meat' is equally as valid now as when it was coined, probably hundreds of years ago. While we most often bring out a delicious rib roast to prove this point, no cut of meat proves the point more tenderly than the frequently overlooked shank.

Shanks, whether they be beef, veal or pork, have a tenderness, a gelatinous texture that makes them, to some palates, far superior to the more luxurious cuts of meat such as tenderloins, fillets and the like. Shanks, too, are exceptionally easy to cook. Other than an occasional basting, they require little attention once they are placed in the oven. The flavors of these three recipes for shank dishes are all influenced by herbs — basil, mint and parsley — and offer a delightful change of pace in winter dining.

2 cloves garlic, peeled and each cut lengthwise into four pieces

Salt and freshly ground pepper

2 tablespoons olive oil

1 cup coarsely chopped onions

1 cup coarsely chopped celery

2 large carrots, scraped, quartered and cut into two-inch lengths

2 cloves garlic, finely minced

1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh basil or 2 teaspoons dried

½ cup dry white wine

½ cup fresh or canned chicken broth.

1. Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

2. Wipe the shank with a damp, clean cloth. Pierce the meaty part of the shank in eight places and insert the garlic slivers inside. Sprinkle the shank with salt and pepper to taste.

3. Place the shank in an ovenproof casserole and pour the oil over the shank. Turn the shank in the oil to coat completely. Place in the oven and bake 15 minutes. Turn the shank and continue cooking.

4. When the shank has cooked 15 minutes longer, or a total of 30 minutes, reduce the oven heat to 350 degrees.

5. Remove the shank and pour off the fat from the pan. Return the shank to the pan and add the onions, celery, carrots, minced garlic and basil. Return the shank with vegetables to the oven and bake 30 minutes. Add the wine and broth and cover the pan closely with foil. Return to the oven and bake one hour longer. Total baking time is two hours.

6. Place the pan on the stove and remove the foil. Bring the pan juices to the boil and reduce slightly, stirring occasionally, about four minutes. Serve sliced with buttered nooddles.

Yield: Three or four servings.

Note: Veal shanks are available from fine butchers. It may be necessary, however, to order them in advance.

Lamb shanks with mint

2 lamb shanks, about 1¼ pounds each

Salt and freshly ground pepper

1 cup coarsely chopped onions

2 bay leaves

2 cloves garlic, coarsely chopped

1 sprig fresh thyme or ¼ teaspoon dried

1 tablespoon crumbled dried mint leaves

2 cups cored, red ripe tomatoes cut into one-inch cubes

1 cup fresh or canned chicken broth.

1. Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

2. Sprinkle the lamb shanks with salt and pepper to taste. Place in a baking dish. If a few spare lamb bones are available, scatter them around the shanks. Place in the oven and bake 25 minutes. Turn the shanks and continue baking.

3. When the shanks have cooked five minutes longer, or a total of half an hour, reduce the oven heat to 350 degrees.

4. Pour off all the fat from the pan. Scatter the onions, bay leaves, garlic, thyme and mint around the shanks. Return to the oven and bake 15 minutes.

5. Scatter the tomatoes over the lamb and add the broth. Cover the pan closely with foil. Continue baking an hour and 15 minutes longer. Total baking time is two hours. Serve the shanks with cooked noodles or orzo, the small Greek pasta.

Yield: Two servings.

4 pork hocks (see note)

4 cups cold water

1 large onion stuck with 2 cloves

1 cup chopped green part of leeks

2 ribs celery, each cut in half

2 carrots, scraped and cut in half or quartered

1 bay leaf

3 sprigs fresh thyme or ½ teaspoon dried

1 tablespoon coriander seeds

2 cloves garlic, peeled

2 sprigs fresh parsley

Salt

4 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

½ teaspoon finely minced garlic

1 teaspoon finely chopped shallots

2 tablespoons red-wine vinegar.

1. Put the pork hocks (or hocks and feet if the trotters are used) in a deep saucepan or small kettle. Cover with cold water and bring to the boil. Drain well and rinse to chill.

2. Return the pork pieces to a clean kettle. Add the four cups of water, onion stuck with cloves, leeks, celery, carrots, bay leaf, thyme, coriander seeds, peeled garlic cloves, parsley sprigs, peppercorns and salt to taste. Bring to the boil and cook one hour. Cover and continue cooking two hours. Total cooking time is three hours.

3. Remove the hocks (and-or pig's feet). Set aside to cool. Strain the liquid into a saucepan.

4. When cool enough to handle, remove all the meat from the bones. Discard the bones. Do not chop the meat but leave it as it comes from the bones.

5. Add the meat to the strained liquid in the saucepan. Add the chopped parsley, minced garlic, shallots and vinegar. Return to the heat. Bring to the boil and test seasoning. If desired, add more salt, pepper, garlic or whatever.

6. Pour the mixture into a six-cup mold. Let cool to room temperature. Refrigerate overnight or until set. Serve sliced. Serve, if desired, with mustard and cornichons (sour pickles) on the side.

Yield: Eight or more servings.

Note: If available, you may also substitute two whole pork trotters which include the shanks and pig's feet in one piece. If used in place of the two hocks, the shanks and feet should be chopped in two and both pieces used from each trotter.

Pampering no help to adjustment

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Four weeks ago, my husband was told that he has very high blood pressure. He is 46, plays squash three times a week and golf on weekends. He just can't adjust to the new limitations that are placed on him at work, at home and with his sports. He behaves as if he's going to be a permanent invalid. We have no children, so I can pamper him, but I can't get him out of his deep funk of depression.

Mrs. O.P.S.

Dear Mrs. S.:

"Pampering" him is certainly not a good idea. For he is obviously behaving as if he had been given a death sentence by the diagnosis of hypertension, or high blood pressure. Actually, he should be grateful that his hypertensive condition was recognized so quickly and that intensive care and medication have been started.

The recognition of the fact that a person has high blood pressure is really a gift. For thousands of people have early, or even advanced, high blood pressure without being aware of it. These people, engaged in business and sports activities, very often run along, benignly unaware of any existing condition, until suddenly they are invalidized by a severe complication that could have been avoided.

The rigid controls which have been established for your husband are only temporary. Usually, when the blood pressure is controlled, such people return to full activity in their jobs and in their sports.

Uncovering potential cases of high blood pressure has top priority with all the great educational drives of modern medicine. One of their basic axioms is that everyone should have some kind of medical checkup at regular intervals, especially if any vague symptoms occasionally occur.

Astonishing advances have been made in the treatment of high blood pressure. Specialized drugs, loss of weight, low fat diet, reduced salt intake and elimination of emotional stress are the key factors in the control of high blood pressure. At first, your husband's regime sounds formidable. It isn't. The new drugs are remarkably effective in keeping blood pressure at a safe level.

His reaction to the diagnosis of hypertension is not unusual. The psychological distress is based on his feelings that he will be incapacitated indefinitely. This is just not so. Your greatest contribution is to avoid treating him like an invalid. If you take his hypertension in stride, eventually he will too. Just be sure that he does not depart from his doctor's planned routine of treatment. For it is well-known that high blood pressure patients have a tendency to prematurely discontinue their drugs.

Yorkshire treat a fake

By MIKE McGRADY

There are some who would call this a classic English dinner. Unfortunately, most seasoned travellers would rank the classic English dinner right up there with the Gobi Desert on the list of all-time over-rated tourist attractions.

The truth is this: A visitor wandering through the inns and hostels of England could order this meal a dozen nights in a row and never come close to the Yorkshire pudding you're going to make tonight, your first time out.

In Yorkshire, where they should surely know better, the pudding is often a glutinous yellow substance that settles into your stomach like fresh-poured concrete. Incidentally, in Yorkshire it is served as a separate course just before the roast beef. This causes many visitors to lose their appetite by the time the meat arrives — and sometimes that's just as well. All too often the roast beef has been cooked to a uniform grayness and dried thoroughly before being sent to your table.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: salt, pepper, milk, flour, eggs, butter, vinegar, mustard, salad oil.

The Shopping List: A six-to-eight-pound rib roast; can of beef bouillon; one small bottle of white horseradish; three large, ripe tomatoes; two Bermuda onions; three apples; a half pound of Cheshire (or cheddar) cheese.

4:30 P.M.: Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Rub salt and pepper into the surface of the roast beef and stand it upright in a baking pan. If you like your meat rare, allow about 18 minutes a pound — roughly an hour and three quarters for a six-pound roast. Medium — add another four minutes per pound.

4:45 P.M.: Place roast in oven.

Tonight's salad is an easy one, thin slices of tomato alternating with thin slices of onion. After arranging the slices on a serving plater, mix up a simple vinaigrette salad dressing and set it aside until later. Three or four parts of salad oil to one part of wine vinegar — then add some salt, pepper, a teaspoon of mustard and, if you're in the mood, a pinch of minced garlic or basil.

5:20 P.M.: And now the horseradish sauce. In a saucepan heat up a can of undiluted beef bouillon over medium-high heat. In a separate saucepan, melt three tablespoons of butter over a medium-low heat. Add the same amount of flour and stir together until smooth. As soon as the bouillon reaches its boiling point, add it to the butter-flour mixture and stir. It will thicken immediately. Remove the saucepan from the heat and add three tablespoons of horseradish. Add more if your taste tells you it needs it. Keep the sauce warm over a very low heat and stir occasionally.

5:35 P.M.: Sharpen your carving knife.

5:45 P.M. You are now ready to construct tonight's piece de resistance, the Yorkshire pudding. Although you can do this with a hand mixer, the easiest way is to use a blender.

Break two eggs into the blender and beat them for 20 or 30 seconds. Now add a cup of milk to the beaten eggs and blend the milk and eggs together. To this foamy mix, add a couple of dashes of salt, a couple of tablespoons of roast beef drippings and a cup of flour. Blend all this together just until the mixture is smooth.

Either a cake pan or a souffle dish will work for the Yorkshire pudding. Add a couple of spoons of beef drippings and allow them to coat the surface of the baking dish. Pour in the batter to a depth of about a half inch.

6:10 P.M.: Put the batter into a very hot oven — turn the heat up to 450 degrees for the first 10 minutes and then down to 350 degrees for the final 15 minutes. If it's necessary to remove the roast beef while the Yorkshire pudding is cooking, that's all right. The beef will continue to cook in its own juices until the pudding is ready.

6:30 P.M.: Carve the roast beef and serve with the horseradish sauce on the side; pour the well-mixed salad dressing over the tomatoes and onions.

And now open the oven. There you should find the perfect Yorkshire pudding, slightly moist at the centre but light and high at the edges, the kind of culinay triumph that would cause any resident of Yorkshire to say, "Hey, what is this stuff?" For dessert: slices of apple and Cheshire (or cheddar) cheese.

CRUNCHY BAKED PEARS

6 pears
½ cup water
1 teaspoon ascorbic acid
½ cup oatmeal
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon ginger
2 tablespoons chopped almonds.
3 tablespoons butter

Cut pears in half and core. Place cut side up in a shallow baking dish. Dissolve ascorbic acid in water and pour over pears making sure all cut surfaces are moistened. Mix oatmeal, brown sugar, flour and ginger. Blend in butter until mixture is crumbly. Stir in chopped almonds. Fill pear centres with crumb mixture. Cover and bake at 350°F for 15 minutes. Remove cover and bake for another 15 minutes until pears are tender.

Makes 6 servings.

Salad hints

Whether they're simple vinegar and oil combinations or extravagant cream-style cheese dressings, salad dressings should be examined from the standpoint of the role they play in gussying up a batch of greens, fruits or vegetables or even seafoods, meats and poultry. They are supposed to enhance the basic ingredients in a salad, not overpower them. A heavy blue cheese dressing may taste divine by itself, but slather it over a delicate, crisp cold shrimp and you'll have wasted your money buying the shrimp — the only flavors that will come through will be those in the dressing.

So rule one in developing a salad dressing pleasing to everyone is to take it easy. This is no place for a heavy hand when it comes to dispensing seasonings.

When constructing a complementary dressing for, say, a crisp green salad, mix your basic oil and vinegar and then add your favorite herbs and spices with a very stingy hand. Don't try to judge the success of the dcressing by how it tastes by itself. That isn't how you'll eat it.

Instead, dip a small piece of lettuce, or whatever green you have chosen, into the dressing, shake it to get rid of any excess and taste that. You'll be able to tell intstantly whether you need a touch of salt, some sweetening, a dash more of your favorite herbs or perhaps something such as a few drops of hot sauce or pepper to point up the combined flavors a bit. Never forget that while taste is purely subjective, if something tastes good to you, it's likely to taste good to most of the people around you.

A word of caution, however. While some people crave strong flavors such as garlic, unless you know the tastes of those you're serving well, it's better to err on the side of too little than too much.

Not all suggested energy-saving chores are necessary for all homes. It isn't necessary to insulate heat pipes when they are in heated areas. After all, leaking heat helps heat the house.

And why insulate pipes carrying hot tap water since these pipes are not in use most of the time — so says the U.S. Department of Energy.

Garlic's power heralded throughout history

By HILDA BEASTALL

Benefits attributed to the use of garlic in daily food were once known in several countries, mostly the southern European and adjoining countries along the eastern Mediterranean Sea. Used by the common people as well as their leaders, perhaps the chief practical use was as an antiseptic (or antibiotic) to prevent ill effects from meat and fish stored without refrigeration in the warm climates.

Later, garlic has indeed been considered by some as a ready made antibiotic, as well as a digestive, and even more recently as containing a compound that "may be valuable in preventing strokes."

The quote is from a recent report in this newspaper from George Washington University in Washington, D.C. Many of the claims for benefits from garlic apply also to onions. Coastal natives of British Columbia were personally known to lay slices of raw onion on the soles of the feet of sick relatives, much to the dismay of attending nurses.

It is only from garlic that a potent oil has been expressed for therapeutic use. This is apparently the concentrated essence of garlic. Great quantities of leeks, onions, chives and other onion-type vegetables would doubtless need to be consumed to gain similar benefits.

GARLIC GROWS almost anywhere in the temperate climates. Here, Mr. and Mrs. Toshio Nakagawa work in the storage hut of their garlic farm in Japan. Some fine species come from the Kootenays in B.C. and you can grow it yourself in a sunny spot in the garden or on a balcony.

So back to garlic, as easily grown as radishes except that it takes longer; or as potatoes, but not requiring more than a two-foot square of good soil to grow enough garlic for a family of four to six. There would be enough for every day of its season.

There is a season to enjoy garlic. It can be used freely from the late August lifting from the ground until some time during February when the first green shoot is found in the centre of each clove, as the small section of a garlic bulb is called.

When this green shoot appears, the digestive oil undergoes changes to make new growth, becoming strong in flavor and odor, unpalatable and indigestible. Cloves are replanted in February, each one producing a plump bulb of many cloves.

Thus is garlic produced, almost anywhere in the temperate climates. Locally, a balcony planter in a sunny spot, a two-square-foot of soil in a door-yard garden, an allotment row, or a sunny spot in the home garden — all are suitable for garlic production.

"But how can we eat the stuff without stinking out the house and everthing in it, including ourselves?" I can hear the question. The answer is: try swallowing a whole small clove raw. Place clove on the moist tongue and wash down with either a little water or milk.

There is no odor remaining on teeth, gums or tongue because the garlic was unbroken and goes directly down to the stomach before releasing the beneficial garlic oil.

Before suggesting conventional uses of garlic in cooking at home it should be said that much of the pleasure of eating at a good restaurant depends on the chef's skill in using garlic. You think the food is wonderful but you don't know why. You certainly are not aware of a garlic odor throughout the restaurant.

Once accustomed to swallowing a whole clove of raw garlic and discovering there is no residual odor or taste, the next step is to add whole cloves to food while cooking instead of grating, chopping or crushing as is still recommended in even some French cookbooks.

The whole clove method is ideal when liquid is used in cooking, for the garlic oil is released gradually and completely so that little flavor remains in the cloves; it has gone into the liquid which is a part of the end product. There it helps form a blend near perfection.

In soups which may take only 30 minutes to make from beginning to end, or in oven casseroles cooking for 50 to 60 minutes, this is the ideal way to introduce garlic.

The whole cloves may be removed before serving and discarded or may be swallowed, still whole if you like. There is little flavor.

This subtle blending gives a rich flavor to quite ordinary vegetables especially when they are used from winter storage.

Celery, onion, potato and carrot used with meat or fish to make stew or chowder ends up as an appetizing rich blend with the addition of whole garlic cloves. Nothing dominates, you have no thought of the presence of garlic. By adding it at the beginning of the cooking you are only aware of its final pleasa effect.

As we go into the cooking of winter vegetables in the next two to three months, we shall be exploring the use of whole garlic cloves from this fall's harvest.

Winter squash of several kinds, parsnips and Jerusalem artichokes, potatoes, these may have the benefit of being cooked with garlic. The vegetable flavor will be more distinct; the cooked garlic can be discarded if desired.

Because of the minerals in garlic, it is possible to cut down on salt usually added to these vegetables and to grain foods cooked with vegetables. Other highly salted condiments such as prepared sauces will be found unnecessary, a saving amounting to many dollars a year for some families.

Even dried peas and beans, including soys, need less salt to make them palatable when garlic is put into the cooking water. The same idea works with brown rice, lentils, enriched macaroni dishes, all protein-rich foods. This is a direct benefit for those on a salt restricted diet.

Frozen vegetables can be improved by dropping a garlic clove into the boiling water before adding the frozen food. Discard before serving since it will not be completely cooked in the few minutes of boiling required for most frozen vegetables. Cut the advised amount of salt in half at least.

Perhaps the method of preparation of the garlic should be given for those unaccustomed to its use.

From a bulb of garlic separate the number of sections (cloves) needed. Properly dried, they are easily detached. With a small knife point remove the outer papery cover. If this seems difficult, put a little scalding water on the cloves in a saucer for two or three minutes. This loosens the outer cover so that it peels off easily.

Parsley or salt rubbed on the hands and the knife removes garlic odor; useful to remember. Chewing a little fresh parsley is said to remove the odor from the breath. This is useful to know if you have unknowingly been subjected to garlic in other methods of cooking.

Fresh garlic used in moderation need not be offensive to the environment. Give it a chance to prove this in your home.

Fish, lemon a classic match

By KAY SPICER

Fish and lemon are great taste-mates. And when the fish is cooked in the microwave oven it's fabulous — flavorful and flaky and always moist.

Since the days of the early Greeks, Romans and sea-food-loving Vikings, food from the sea has been a popular menu item. No one knows when the first lemon was squeezed over fish. We know today that most people prefer fish with the added tang and zest fresh lemon can provide.

As the variety of species in local markets has increased, fish and seafood cookery has become more sophisticated. Fish lends itself beautifully to microwave cooking. Hook up your favorite fish with lemon in these quick-to-prepare, delightful-to-eat entrees for family or guests.

FISH 'N' RICE
Makes 4 servings

- 1½ cups quick-cooking rice
- ½ cup shredded carrot
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 chicken bouillon cube
- Grated peel of 1 fresh lemon
- ¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 1½ cups boiling water
- 1 pound frozen sole or haddock fillets, defrosted
- Juice of ½ fresh lemon
- Paprika
- Salt (optional)

Microwave — High Power Setting:

Combine rice, carrot, 1 tablespoon butter, bouillon cube, lemon peel and poultry seasoning in round 8-inch diam. glass baking dish; stir in boiling water. Cook, covered with waxed paper, for 3 minutes. Uncover; stir rice. # Hachis Parmentier just meat, potatoes

the 60-minute gourmet

In all my years as a professional chef, I have never met a colleague who was weaned on what is called haute or classic cuisine. Most chefs, including myself, were born in modest circumstances in which eating was a major diversion.

The food in my own home was definitely cuisine bourgeoise or family-style cooking, and as such was marked by a simplicity both in ingredients and cooking techniques. It was also marked by economy.

One of the favorite dishes of my childhood is called hachis Parmentier. The word "hachis" is derived from the French "hacher," meaning to chop. It refers to a dish made with chopped or ground meat. Incidentally, that is where the American dish called hash came from. Parmentier pertains to the potatoes used in the dish. Antoine-Auguste Parmentier was a French economist who is credited with making potatoes popular in France during the late 18th century.

A fine hachis Parmentier is the French equivalent of the English shepherd's pie, though I believe the English version is almost always made with lamb. The French creation can be made with almost any kind of meat or poultry, cooked or not, that is made into a stew, covered with mashed potatoes and baked. The recipe here is simple and economical. The "hash" here consists of ground beef cooked in a light tomato sauce with seasonings. It is quickly made, too. While the potatoes for the topping are cooked before mashing, there is ample time to prepare the ground meat base. The mushroom sauce to accompany it can be made in a very few minutes before it is allowed to simmer on its own.)

HACHIS PARMENTIER
(A meat and potato pie)

4 potatoes, about 1 ¼ pounds
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup finely chopped onions
1 small clove garlic, finely minced
1 ½ pounds ground beef
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 bay leaf
2 sprigs fresh thyme or ½ teaspoon dried
¼ cup tomato paste
½ cup milk
⅛ teaspoon grated nutmeg
3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese.

1. Peel the potatoes, cutting each into six pieces of equal size. Put the potatoes in a saucepan and add water to cover. Bring to the boil and simmer about 20 minutes or until tender.

2. Heat one tablespoon butter in a saucepan and add the onion and garlic. Cook, stirring, until onions wilt.

3. Add the beef and cook, chopping down with the side of a heavy metal spoon to break up the lumps. When the meat has lost its raw color, add salt, pepper, bay leaf, thyme and tomato paste. Cover and cook about 20 minutes. Discard the bay leaf.

4. Preheat the broiler to high.

5. Meanwhile, drain the potatoes and put them through a food mill or potato ricer. Return potatoes to the saucepan and add remaining two tablespoons butter, stirring until butter melts.

6. Heat the milk and add it gradually to the potatoes, beating with a wooden spoon. Add salt to taste, nutmeg and half the parsley.

7. Add the remaining parsley to the beef mixture.

8. Spoon the beef into a flame-proof baking dish. A dish that measures about 8 by 11 ½ by 2 inches is ideal for this. Spoon the potatoes over the meat and smooth the top with a spatula. Sprinkle with the cheese.

9. Place the dish under the broiler and broil about five minutes or less, until the potatoes are nicely browned. Serve with mushroom sauce.

Sauce aux Champignons
(Mushroom sauce)

¼ pound fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter
¾ cup finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon finely minced garlic
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
¼ cup dry white wine
1 ½ cups chopped canned tomatoes
¼ cup heavy cream.

1. Slice the mushrooms thinly. There should be about two cups. Set aside.

2. Heat half the butter in a saucepan and add the onion and garlic. Cook until the onion wilts.

3. Add the mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste. Cook, stirring often, until the mushrooms give up their liquid. Cook until this liquid evaporates.

4. Add the wine. Cook until wine almost evaporates. Add tomatoes and stir. Cover and cook about 15 minutes.

5. Stir the remaining butter into the sauce and add the cream. Bring to the boil and serve hot.

Yield: 4 servings.

questions & answers

Stone in jelly really the pits

Q. I have, on my pantry shelf, a Damson plum jelly that says "half stoned." I know it sounds like a joke, but can you tell me what that means?

A. It is an educated guess that this refers to a jelly that includes some of the pits of the Damson plums from which the jelly was made. Pits are on occasion referred to as stones. Come to think of it, I can't think of a single logical reason why anyone would want the pits in jelly unless it is to show the authenticity of the product. It is like the cook I know who always throws a little birdshot into his pheasant dishes to establish the fact that they are game birds and not cultivated.

Q. I know that you have recently written columns on cooking without salt. I must cook for my husband who is on a no-salt diet. My problem is canned and frozen vegetables, most of which contain salt. Does rinsing help to eliminate the salt?

A. While rinsing would eliminate some of the brine in which the vegetables are processed in cans and would eliminate a trace of the salt in frozen foods, it is certainly no solution in providing a salt-free diet. If you cannot find salt-free foods in cans or frozen, you should obviously resort to preparing foods from their raw state.

Q. A short while ago a neighbor gave me a batch of two weed-like greens with leaves that resembled to a degree those of a jade plant. The "weed" had reddish stems that I bit into. The taste was quite pleasant. I learned that it was actually an herb called purslane or portulaca. Do you know if it is eaten in this country or if it can be bought at greengrocers?

A. Although portulaca was a common flowering plant that bordered the sidewalk around my home in Mississippi, I never sampled it. I am told that certain cultures of the East cook and eat it. I am also told that it is not uncommon in salads in France, but I cannot vouch for that. It is certainly not widely known in this country as a salad ingredient, and I have never seen it on the market anywhere.

Q. What is the best way to store fresh nuts such as pecans, almonds and pine nuts after a package has been opened?

A. I transfer the nuts to a plastic container or glass jar and seal the container or jar as tightly as possible and store in the freezer. I have pistachio nuts that were placed in the freezer at the time of last year's year-end holidays and plan to use them next month for pates. They are in excellent condition.

Woman wins on abortion

LISBON (Reuter) — A woman won a quick acquittal Monday on charges of having an illegal abortion in a case which could test anti-abortion laws in predominantly Roman Catholic Portugal. After a four-hour hearing, the court acquitted Conceicao Massano, 22, on the charge of having had an abortion three years ago.

Big cats now are home free

CALGARY (CP) — Bonnie Roddis was prepared to shoot her lion, jaguar, cougar and two tigers during the weekend, but now she's all smiles as the future of the beasts seemed secure.

The department of fish and wildlife had told her that new facilities she built on her new property north of Cochrane, Alta., were inadequate to house the animals.

The provincial government threatened to remove the animals from her care unless better facilities were built.

But the Calgary woman worked night and day with her husband, Allan, and 12 volunteers to upgrade the new pens, which have now received government approval.

Mr. and Mrs. Roddis were fighting against time after being threatened with eviction from their old property, which they sold last July to Robert Cameron.

"All I can say now is that I'm very, very grateful the province gave us a little extra time," Mrs. Roddis said.

The Roddises bought land in the Cochrane area, 20 kilometres northwest of Calgary, with the intention of creating a drive-through safari park.

If approved by the province, the park would house about 500 exotic animals on 160 acres. The Roddises plan to purchase most of the animals from Al Oeming's Alberta Game Farm near Edmonton.

However, the couple is still required by the province to construct additional facilities for the cats.

Gordon Kerr, assistant deputy minister of fish and wildlife, said indoor pens at the new acreage have been approved "but they still have to put up fencing for the outdoor pens."

"Basically this department is worried about adequate safety precautions. The outdoor fencing will act as a double safety measure and we've given the Roddises 48 hours to meet the requirements."

Battery thieves hunted

EDMONTON (CP) — City police are hunting for a gang of automobile battery thieves who have stripped 90 cars and trucks of their batteries in the last three days.

Police said the batteries were taken from vehicles at an auto salvage yard, a contractor's motor pool and a provincial government vehicle depot. In each case the wire fencing surrounding the compounds had been sliced open.

Police believe the thieves are stealing the batteries to sell. The casing alone is worth between $7.50 and $10.

Love affair with bigness seen in west

North American man likes bigness . . . big cars . . . big business . . . big farms.

Nowhere is this more apparent than in Canada's west where grain farms grow ever-bigger and fewer farmers harvest more and more acres with ever-larger machinery.

In the 40 years between the 1931 and 1971 census, Alberta lost 119,173 farm families, Saskatchewan 330,220 and Manitoba 125,103. About half the people left the land.

The average size of a farm in the three provinces, meanwhile, has more than doubled.

In Alberta, the average farm jumped from 400 acres in 1931 to 790 acres in 1971 and 864 acres in 1976. In Saskatchewan, a 408-acre farm in 1931 grew to 845 acres in 1971 and 939 acres in 1976, while in Manitoba the figures were 279, 543 and 628 during the growth years.

What are the ramifications of this major social change?

A study carried out in the California farming communities of Dinuba and Arvin during the 1940s offered some ominous portents. The towns were located in the same general area and climatic environment, but Dinuba had modest-size farms and Arvin was surrounded by very large farms.

It was found that the small farm community supported 62 businesses while the large farm supported only 35. Retail trade in Dinuba was $4.5 million a year compared with Arvin's $2.5 million.

Agricultural production from small farms supported 20 per cent more people in the local community than in the large-farm community, and this increased number of people had a better standard of living.

Half the breadwinners in Dinuba were independent businessmen, people in white collar jobs or farmers. In Arvin, less than one-fifth the people held these types of positions.

One-third of the people in Dinuba were low-paid farm laborers, while two-thirds of the gainfully employed people in Arvin fell into this category. Schools, recreation faclities, civic groups, newspapers and churches were all more plentiful in the small farm community.

The study noted this main cultural difference between the two towns: "The small-farm community is a population of middle-class persons with a high degree of stabiity in income and tenure, and a strong economic and social interest in their communtiy.

"Differences in wealth among them are not great, and the people generally associate together in those organizations which serve the community.

"Where farms are large, on the other hand, the population consists of relatively few persons with economic stability, and of large numbers whose only tie to the community is their uncertain and relatively low-income job.

"Differences in wealth are great among members of this community, and social contacts between them are rare. Indeed, even the operators of large-scale farms frequently are absentees; and if they do live in Arvin, they often seek their recreation in the nearby city.

". . . attitudes such as these are not conducive to stability and the rich kind of rural community life which is properly associated with the traditional family farm."

This is the very type of cultural deterioration that has hit many — but not all — of the small towns and villages on the prairies. The California study succinctly concluded, "From the industrialized sowing of the soil is reaped an urbanized society."

And, if you believe that cultural deterioration in rural Canada could lead to the eventual deterioration of the whole country you may not be entirely right, but you'll be in good company.

Thomas Jefferson said in 1787, "I think our government will remain virtuous for many centuries, as long as it is chiefly agricultural . . . when they get piled upon one another in large cities . . . they will become corrupt." (Leo Quigley is managing editor of Report on Farming, a Winnipeg-based monthly publication.)

Female brass? Here's one

WINNIPEG (CP) — The newly-elected president of the Winnipeg Executives' Association says it has no female members because there are no female executives in the city.

Paul Herriott said that if there is a female executive in Winnipeg, the 56-year-old association is unaware of her.

However, the female head of a large corporation based in Winnipeg disagrees with Herriott.

"I guess you could say I'm an executive," Clare C. Leckie, president and chairman of the board of Robinson Little and Co., said in an interview.

She said she has been running the company since since her husband died in 1962.

Baby spanked

CALGARY (CP) — An Olds, Alta., woman spanked her two-month-old daughter because she didn't want her to be brought up like a spoiled brat, the woman's sister testified in Court of Queen's Bench.

Donna Bergen was testifying at a first day of the hearing into a charge of criminal negligence against Nancy Jean Moore, 23, in the death of the infant. Mrs. Moore has pleaded not guilty to the charge.

$3,000 to collect

WINNIPEG (CP) — With 3,058 kilometres of paddling behind them, all that remains for David Curtis and Craig Jaffray is to collect more than $3,000 of pledges they have raised for Winnipeg's Assiniboine Zoo. The 23-year-old adventurers were wet and cold when they arrived in Winnipeg after a three-month trek that took them from Lake Louise, Alta., down the Bow, South Saskatchewan, Qu'Appelle and Assiniboine rivers.

Provincial exams

EDMONTON (CP) — City public school trustees have voted to support a return to Grade 12 departmental examinations.

The trustees will recommend to the Education Minister Dave King that 30 per cent of a student's final mark should be determined by the province-wide tests in all Grade 12 subjects, with the remaining portion provided by the school district.

Opening lead — king of spades.

The most distinguishing characteristic of the top bridge players is that they rarely make an error. It is widely thought that the expert achieves that rank because he manages to execute all kinds of squeezes, endplays, coups and various other complicated maneuvers that dazzle his opponents and render them helpless.

But nothing could be further from the truth. The expert is an expert mostly because, time after time, he uses very good judgment and seldom errs. True, he is familiar with all the fancy bids and plays you can name, but the opportunity to apply these exotic gadgets does not occur nearly as often as the simple humdrum problems that arise in almost every deal.

Consider the accompanying hand where declarer went down in four hearts. West led the K-A-5 of spades, South ruffing the third spade. Declarer saw that he had two diamond losers to take care of and that his best shot by far was to try to ruff them in dummy.

He therefore cashed the K-A of diamonds and ruffed the next diamond in dummy with the nine. Unfortunately, East overruffed with the jack, returned a trump, and South later lost another diamond trick to go down one.

South should have ruffed the third diamond with the king, not the nine! This play would have guaranteed the contract. He could then return to his hand by ruffing a club and now, belatedly, ruff the jack of diamonds with dummy's nine. True, East would have overruffed, but South would then have ten tricks in the till.

It is easy to say that it was careless of South to trump the third diamond lead with the nine, but that is exactly the kind of play the expert excludes from his bag of tricks.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 4479 for the game today. One 9, one 7 and two 4's. Using all four each time but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used but no summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots. For example, 74-9+4 is a solution for 69.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 160. I shall be glad to check solutions and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Yesterday's answer: TROT was 1061.

Topper of a honeymoon

scott's world
by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kate Jackson, formerly a Charlie's Angel, and bridegroom Andrew Stevens devoted their honeymoon to producing a TV movie version of the 1937 screen classic Topper in which they co-star Nov. 9.

Two sequels were subsequently made with different casts, Topper Takes a Trip and Topper Returns.

The two-hour TV film features Jack Warden as Cosmo Topper and Rue McClanahan as his wife.

Anne Jeffries, Robert Sterling and Leo G. Carroll starred for three years in a 1950s television series based on the Thorne Smith comedy novel, making it a well-worn and familiar property to several generations.

The story involves a young couple, George and Marion Kerby, killed in an automobile accident, who return as shades to haunt Topper who is the only one on earth who can see and hear them.

Kate was negotiating for rights to Topper when she met and married Andrew, son of actress Stella Stevens.

"I always thought it would be fun to revive Topper, Kate said. "And when I married Andrew he speeded up the process of negotiating with the Thorne Smith estate.

"We are staying pretty close to the original movie but we've added some characters and plot twists to meet the demands of the two-hour format which is considerably longer than the original picture."

It may not be the storybook honeymoon, but the young couple spent most of the first year of their marriage putting the package together for their Cosmo Productions.

They worked on the script, did the casting, selected location sites, chose the musical scoring, helped with the editing and controlled the final cut.

"Once we bought the property we were confronted with the decision of making it a feature film or a TV movie," Andrew said. "We decided on the TV format so we could assume 100 per cent financial responsibility and ownership."

"We called the shots on this one in all the creative departments," Kate added. "The easiest part was acting together. It's my first TV appearance since I left Charlie's Angels more than a year ago."

Kate and Andrew, both bright and ambitious, thought the best way to start their marriage would be with a successful project of their own.

"We brought a lot of the problems home from the set and hashed them over during dinner every night," said Andrew. "We've really devoted a year of our life to getting the movie done the way we want it. After the first showing on ABC we own the property outright.

"We put our salaries up against the picture's budget, meaning if we ran over budget the difference would come out of our pay. We didn't run over by much and the profits bought us our new house.

"If it gets high numbers in the Nielsen Ratings, we may just go into production with Topper as a weekly series."

"Besides being an exciting creative venture," said Kate, Topper has been a fascinating business venture. We learned a lot about production for future projects we hope to make."

After completing Topper, Kate took off for Montreal and Boston to star with Elliott Gould in Dirty Tricks. Andrew remained in Hollywood to star in the mini-series Beggerman, Thief.

Set moves to Canadian sub

HALIFAX (CP) — A crew of top-name actors was in this Atlantic port last week as the cast of the $18-million film Virus filmed shipboard scenes on a Canadian Forces submarine.

The cast includes Chuck Connors, George Kennedy, Glenn Ford, Robert Vaughn and Swedish-born star Bo Svenson.

A Japanese firm, Kadokawa Films Inc., brought the international cast here to film an eight-minute scene aboard HMCS Okanagan, an Oberon-class submarine stationed at the Canadian Forces Base Halifax dockyard.

"Although the events in Virus are not likely to happen, they are surely a possibility," said Connors, who plays the captain of a British submarine — represented in the film by the Okanagan.

Balloon programs fine but play's disgusting

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It's loud, it's profane, it's funny, it's disgusting!

It's Codco's WNOBS.

This week at The Belfry the Newfoundland-based company is turning it on — and turning a few stomachs in the process — with a deliberately outrageous grab at a no-holds-barred broad comedy revue.

It's a grassroots brand of coarse humor that boots everything around the stage from sex to religion and death.

Unfortunately the show's material is so lacking in basic wit that its dependency on bodily functions and four-letter words becomes tedious before the evening is out.

It's not a long show — it finishes before 10 p.m. But the monotony of delivery and the repetitive nature of the humor makes it seem much longer.

The show is at its funniest when the audience is commanded to "inflate its dirigibles" (balloons taped to the programs) because all are taking off for the planet Ludo — or is that Loo-do? At that point laughter was plentiful, the show was working and briefly almost worthy of its Canada Council-supported presence on the Belfry stage.

The cast, Andy Jones, Mary Walsh, Tommy Sexton and Cathy Jones with Brian Hennessey at the piano, have the energy and discernible gifts for characterization that make one suspect they could handle better material and better direction capably.

From previous experience, one attends a Codco show knowing the comedy will be broad and coarse-flavored — but also expecting satire whittled to a sharp point and some nuggets of wit, unpolished but nevertheless genuine gold. These never show.

What satire there is is diffuse and barbless. Much of it is over-reached and labored.

There is just one catchy musical number, I'm Subject to Mood Swings.

WNOBS has one level: loud and strident. About three or four times there comes a lull; but these lulls are not variations in pace, merely a sudden subsidence of energy that puts a rent in the fabric.

I'm not saying this show isn't funny. The Belfry will echo to lots of laughter this week, laughter being a contagious commodity. But from a national company like Codco one expects some substance and quality.

By the way, if you're wondering what WNOBS means, it's an abbreviation for White Niggers of Bond Street.

Soviet ships collide off Denmark

COPENHAGEN (AP) — Two Soviet ships strengthened for icebreaking collided in a Danish strait today. One of them, carrying scientists to an Antarctic expedition, was in the wrong sea lane and caught fire after the collision, leaving one dead, four missing and 94 rescued, officials said.

The Danish naval command said the 9,243-ton Antarctic expedition ship Olenek and the 22,632-ton tanker General Shkodunovich collided in rough seas in the Great Belt, between Zealand and Fyn, Denmark's two biggest islands.

Oil bill boosts U.S. deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record oil import bill helped push the United States balance of trade into a $2.83-billion deficit in September, the second highest deficit this year, the U.S. commerce department said Tuesday.

U.S. exports in September totalled $15.83 billion, up 0.1 per cent from August, while imports rose to $18.67 billion, a 2.7-per-cent rise from August. The September trade deficit of $2.83 billion was the highest for any month since January when it was $3.1 billion.

The trade deficit during all of 1978 was a record $28.5 billion, but the U.S. government hopes to reduce that to $24 billion this year, a target that still seems within reach.

The quantity of imported oil, meanwhile, at least temporarily breached President Carter's pledge to limit oil imports to an average of 8.2 million barrels a day.

Imports averaged 8.46 million barrels a day for the month and, for the nine months ended in September, they averaged 8.16 million barrels a day, under the limit.

Carter administration economists said the president's pledge applied to the average for the year. But if imports continued in the final three months of the year at the September level the limit would be exceeded.

The president has said he would set import quotas to make sure that doesn't happen, but Congress was on the verge Tuesday of stripping away his authority to fix quotas.

The commerce department report showed the U.S. paid $5.8 billion for imported oil and related products in September, up from $5.2 billion in August and a record for any month in history.

The average price for a barrel of imported oil rose $1.11 to $22.25, the result of the steady upward increase in oil prices imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Total imports of oil and energy products in September were 253.9 million barrels, up from 240.8 million in August and raising the total for the year to 2.23 billion barrels. The total at the same time last year was 2.16 billion barrels.

Meanwhile, a separate commerce department report showed the economy might have been poised in September for another spurt in growth.

The Index of Leading Indicators, which is designed to indicate future economic trends, rose by 0.8 per cent in September, the largest gain in 17 months. It had increased 0.1 per cent in August and decreased 0.3 per cent in July.

Carter-Kennedy TV debate?

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Carter has decided to challenge Sen. Edward Kennedy to a series of nationally televised debates during their looming battle for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination, according to White House aides.

"It's possible," a spokesman for the senator said when asked if Kennedy would accept such a Carter offer. But Tom Southwick, Kennedy's campaign press secretary, said no formal proposal had been made.

An obvious drawback for Carter in offering to debate Kennedy is that the Massachussetts Democrat would be given instant equality with the president, erasing some of Carter's advantage as the incumbent.

If Kennedy accepts Carter's challenge, he too, will be violating an important political law: Never debate an opponent when you are leading in the polls.

Before Kennedy announced he was considering challenging Carter, he was a 2-1 favorite for the nomination among Democrats surveyed in national polls. Since then, however, the gap has narrowed.

Meanwhile, Kennedy has scored a political coup and embarrassed Carter by wooing Ambassador Dick Clark, the former Iowa senator, into his campaign.

Clark, the administration's co-ordinator for refugee affairs, earlier told the White House he would stay neutral in the Carter-Kennedy battle.

Carter was not happy about the endorsement, which took the White House by surprise.

An official said Vice-President Walter Mondale, aware of Clark's close ties to Kennedy, had sounded out Clark on his conflicting loyalties some time ago. Clark told Mondale, the official said, he preferred to stay on in the refugee job and "remain neutral throughout the campaign."

Clark's support could be a key factor in organizing the Kennedy campaign in Iowa — the state that launches the 1980 delegate selection process next January at the precinct level.

Kennedy has admitted Carter now leads in Iowa: "He (Carter) has a very significant organization on the ground in Iowa," the senator told reporters last week.

Carter has put on an impressive organizational effort in Iowa that has left Kennedy far behind.

"What he (Clark) is is one damn fine organizational person," said Matt Wanning, chief operative of the draft-Kennedy movement in Iowa. "If there's some way we can catch up, he's the one to do it."

In his endorsement, Clark said, "I think the country needs — I hate to use the word — Kennedy's leadership.

"Given the mood of the country, its pessimism, I decided that Edward Kennedy can turn the country on," he said. "I saw him work in the Senate and I think he's needed as president."

S. African 'copter raid on Angola alleged

Times News Services

LONDON — Angola accused South Africa today of killing 20 persons, 18 of them civilians, in a raid by helicopter-borne soldiers into southern Angola.

In Pretoria, Foreign Minister Pik Botha said today the accusation is a smokescreen to divert attention from the fact that Angola harbors guerrillas.

But a defence force spokesman said earlier that South Africa maintains the right to follow guerrillas to their bases wherever they are.

Angola Radio, monitored in London, said the South African soldiers destroyed road bridges and a railway tunnel near towns north of the border with Namibia (South-West Africa).

Quoting a communique from the Angolan politburo, the radio said the raid was carried out on Sunday by 150 South African soldiers brought in by 11 helicopters.

It said they carried out "sabotage" operations in the Serra da Leba area of southern Angola.

Earlier, a statement by Ambassador Luis de Almeida at Angola's Belgian mission in Brussels said South African soldiers were taken to the towns of Mocamedes and Lubango.

The ambassador said the troops "occupied strategic points after having destroyed all bridges linking the Serra de Leba with the rest of the country, as well as large strips of Mocamedes."

"At this time, we don't know the extent of the destructions or the number of victims," Almeida said.

He said his country had asked the UN Security Council for an urgent meeting "to examine this new aggression by the South African racists."

Lubango, which has been renamed Sa Da Bandeira, is in Huila province in western Angola, and the Mocamedes province is on the Atlantic coast. The provinces lie just across the border from South West Africa, which South Africa administers in contravention of UN resolutions.

Guerrillas from the South-West Africa Peoples Organization carry out raids on Namibia from bases in Angola and Zambia.

Angola in turn has accused South Africa of allowing guerrillas from Jonas Savimbi's outlawed National Union for the Total Independence of Angola to use Namibia.

Salmon baits tourist blitz

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian tourism officials trying to drum up more convention business began a Washington blitz Tuesday with a salmon lunch for 200 association executives at a Canadian-owned hotel.

About 40 Canadians involved in the campaign planned to follow up the lunch with two days of visits to association leaders aimed at getting commitments to hold future meetings or conventions in Canada.

Peter Shelly of CP Hotels, the hotel industry representative on a steering committee that organizes Canadian tourism promotion, said in an interview the Canadians planned to contact more than 400 association executives here.

The Canadian tourism industry has been severely damaged by a 1976 U.S. tax law limiting tax deductions for attending foreign conventions to two trips a year.

Reginald Groome, vice-chairman of the Tourism Industry Association of Canada, estimated recently that the tax regulation has cost the Canadian economy up to $100 million a year through the cancellation of conventions.

Shelly said the visiting Canadians planned to try to convince Americans that the law doesn't have to mean a halt to plans to hold conventions outside the U.S., he said. The Canadians also planned to demonstrate the benefits of holding a convention in Canada, including the exchange-rate advantage for the U.S. dollar and the fact that Canadians were willing to do much of the paperwork involved in complying with the U.S. tax law.

Cutback ordered on oil

LONDON (UPI) — Britain has ordered two major oil companies to reduce their production of crude oil from a key North Sea field by 46 per cent to reduce wasteful burn-off of natural gas.

Shell UK Ltd. and Esso were told to cut crude production from 185,000 barrels a day to 100,000 barrels daily over the next three months until equipment is installed to reinject the gas waste into the field so it can be piped ashore later.

The order will mean that British supplies from its North Sea offshore rigs will drop 10 per cent this winter.

In New York, Exxon said the reduction in output from its North Sea field amounts to less than 1 per cent of the company's total world-wide crude supply.

Energy Minister Hamish Gray told Parliament Monday that gas burned off from Brent amounted to 10 per cent of Britain's daily consumption.

Shell and Esso said the cutback could lead to higher prices for fuel oil, gasoline and heating oil and they could not rule out the possibility of shortages during the winter months.

106 face protest charges

SEATTLE (AP) — The federal government on Tuesday formally charged 106 anti-Trident demonstrators with misdemeanors for climbing over a barbed wire fence and onto the naval nuclear submarine base near Bangor, Wash.

A parade of defendants — scheduled at 25 an hour beginning at 10 a.m. — came before U.S. Magistrate Philip Sweigert. He informed them of the charge against them, entered not guilty pleas for them and released them without bond.

They were charged with entering the naval base without the commanding officer's permission. Conviction carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Conspiracy probed in Korean assassination

SEOUL (UPI) — Dozens of South Korea's top intelligence officials are being held by military authorities investigating a possible widespread conspiracy behind the assassination of President Park Chung-hee.

Official announcements by the Military Law Command have pinned the murders of Park and five bodyguards last Friday night on the man who headed the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Jae-kyu, and five other KCIA operatives.

The military investigators announced Tuesday that Park's chief of staff has been under arrest since Saturday. Kim Kae-won, also a former KCIA director, was uninjured in the bloody massacre, and investigators apparently want to know why.

The military said "many" other people were undergoing round-the-clock questioning and sources placed the number of suspects under arrest between 30 and 50, virtually all of them senior members of the KCIA.

The arrests of the intelligence men indicated military officials suspect Park's murder was part of a wider conspiracy, and not simply the plotting of the KCIA director who feared he was about to lose his job, as officially announced in an interim report.

A U.S. 7th Fleet task patrolled the waters south of Korea as a warning to North Korea not to interfere in the crisis in the south, a move officially denounced today by North Korea.

In Washington, officials said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will represent the United States at Park's state funeral Saturday.

Park's chief secretary was one of four men in the dining room of the KCIA annex when the president and his chief bodyguard, Cha Ji-chul, were shot and killed. The aide and the assassin were the only ones who left the room unhurt.

The extent of any army involvement is unknown, although immediately after the killing, Kim Jae-kyu met with army chief of staff Gen. Chung Sung-hwa.

Sources in Seoul said it "didn't appear to be a classic power grab," although the army is now playing a major role in running the country-wide martial law.

Sources close to the case said Chung was apparently unaware of Kim's deed and only found out about it when the president's aide called to tell him Kim had just killed Park.

Technically, the civilian government headed by acting President Choi Kyu-hah is still in charge and has been meeting daily to monitor security and economic matters.

U.S. officials said Washington has "a very major interest in seeing this thing hang together, for security reasons, for economic reasons" and hopes that whatever government emerges in Seoul be as broadly based as possible.

RACHELE MUSSOLINI

Benito's widow dies

PREDAPPIO, Italy (AP) — Rachele Mussolini, wiry little widow of Italy's Second World War dictator and staunch defender of his memory despite his legendary infidelities, died of a heart attack at her home Tuesday. She was 89.

She survived Benito Mussolini by 34 years. The Fascist leader and his mistress, Claretta Petacci, were shot in 1945 by a partisan executioner.

Relatives said the former Rachele Guidi collapsed from a heart attack in the early afternoon after weeks of deteriorating health.

Standing at her bedside were her son Vittorio and her daughter Edda, the widow of Galeazzo Ciano. Ciano was the foreign minister whom Mussolini had executed as a traitor in 1944. Her other surviving son, Romano, a jazz pianist, was in Genoa for a performance.

According to historians, Mussolini had a long list of love affairs. Besides his five children from Rachele, he had three children out of wedlock, two by an Italian woman and one by a French woman.

Kamikaze Kipper survives

BRIERLY HILLS, England (UPI) — A South Seas fish, unhappy with his new home, broke the glass side of a pet shop aquarium killing $3,000 worth of rare fish.

Shopkeeper Chris Parsons said the clown trigger fish gnawed through a piece of coral, which collapsed and pinned a water heater against the side of the six-foot aquarium.

The glass is a half-inch thick and armor-plated, but it couldn't take the heat and exploded, ripping out the side of the tank. Most of the fish were thrown to the pet shop floor.

Court awards boy

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A four-year-old boy who swallowed an acid swimming pool cleaner two years ago has been granted $350,000 in an out-of-court settlement.

Lawyers had filed a $4.6 million damage suit on behalf of the boy, Robert Baruch.

After several pretrial motions Monday, Spokane County Superior Court Judge Philip J. Thompson urged lawyers for both sides to discuss a settlement before jury selection started. The agreement was announced a few hours later.

According to the suit, the boy, living with his foster parents, Joseph and Diane Vollar, found and drank a quantity of "TLC" swimming pool cleaner on June 2, 1977.

The suit claimed the child, who has been formally adopted by Steven and Kathleen Baruch since the incident, will be unemployable as an adult and will have breathing difficulties the rest of his life as a result of drinking the compound.

'Dambuster' maker dead at age of 92

LONDON (Reuter) — Sir Barnes Wallis, the ingenious designer of airships and jet planes who also invented Second World War "dambuster" bouncing bombs, died in hospital Tuesday at the age of 92.

Wallis

To have breached the dams simply by dropping bombs from above them would have required a colossal amount of explosives.

In the Second World War before designing bombs, he designed the Wellesley and Wellington bombers. The Wellington was so tough it could fly back to base with gaping holes in its wings and fuselage.

2 more sex charges laid

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two more sex charges were lodged against alleged Hillside Strangler Angelo Buono Tuesday and he pleaded innocent on all counts, including charges he murdered 10 girls and young women.

Buono, 45, a cousin of confessed strangler Kenneth Bianchi, was additionally accused of oral sex and illegal sex with a minor involving Rebecca Spears, a girl who has told reporters she worked for him as a prostitute at the age of 15.

Municipal Court Judge Gabriel Gutierrez set Dec. 10 for introduction of further motions and Jan. 21, 1980, for a preliminary hearing.

In addition to the 10 "strangler" killings, Buono had been charged with sodomy, extortion, conspiracy, pimping and pandering.

Buono will be defended by "a team of 13 to 35" lawyers and investigators, "probably the largest defense effort in the history of the California courts and maybe the whole country," said Buono's attorney.

He said such a large team is needed because of the seriousness of the charges — the prosecution is expected to seek the death penalty — and because during the long hunt for the strangler, detectives amassed a huge collection of clues and hints pointing to others as the stranglers.

CP dickering for Laurel Pt.

Expansion of Laurel Point Inn is guaranteed despite the strong likelihood it will be sold to Marathon Realty, Canadian Freehold Ltd. president John D'eath said today.

He said Marathon has made an offer to take over all the assets of Canadian Freehold and a decision will be made before year's end.

Canadian Freehold is a Vancouver-based real estate subsidiary of CIL while Marathon is owned by Canadian Pacific Investments.

The takeover would give CP ownership of the two major hotels on the downtown waterfront, Laurel Point and The Empress.

The Empress is operated directly but CP would be tied to a 20-year management contract to Delta Hotels Ltd., which operates Laurel Point Inn.

Part of the contract is an understanding that the hotel will be expanded to more than 300 rooms from its present 128.

Canadian Freehold had plans on the drawing board to begin construction this year to double the size of the present hotel but the work was delayed due to soaring interest rates.

"Expansion will have to come, regardless of who owns the hotel," D'eath said.

"It is not economic to operate the hotel on that valuable site with fewer than 300 rooms. In addition, there is the understanding with Delta that it will be expanded."

Can Michigan PCB disaster happen here?

By PAUL MINVIELLE

More and more British Columbians are concerned about possible polychlorinated biphenyl or PCB pollution of the food they buy and eat.

That concern has been heightened in recent weeks with the mass destruction of contaminated chickens in Washington State and the suspicion that foodstuffs in this province may have been contaminated, too.

So far, there has been no concrete evidence that the food you buy off your supermarket shelf has been tainted. But there is a nagging suspicion that at some point in the future, this could happen.

In the weeks immediately after it was learned there had been some chemical contamination of feed produced in B.C., Agriculture Canada officials issued reassuring reports that the matter was being closely monitored.

As recently as Oct. 15, Ralph Houghton, regional director of food products and marketing branch of the department, said that ongoing testing of milk, eggs and poultry was turning up only trace levels of PCB or no PCB at all.

Houghton said the chemical — used as a coolant in such electrical heat exchange devices as transformers — got into animal feed produced by three Fraser Valley companies.

The PCB incident began at the Pierce Packing Co. plant in Billings, Mont., in June.

A front-end loader struck a transformer and the the polychlorinated biphenol (PCB), similar to DDT in its persistence in depositing and remaining in fatty tissue, leaked into an animal tallow pool.

Before the leak was reported, the tallow had been shipped to Spokane, Wash., and then to the Fraser Valley, where it was incorporated into animal feed.

Houghton reported that no PCB traces have been found in pigs or cows.

In fact, only chickens in B.C. and Washington at first were found to contain the chemical, but the B.C. chickens showed nowhere near the levels of PCB which prompted officials in Washington to order 12,000 chickens killed.

Washington also ordered the destruction of 9,000 other butchered birds destined for market after the chickens tested out at four parts PCB per million.

Another 415,000 Washington birds were to be tested to see if they must be slaughtered.

Houghton said Agriculture Canada became aware of the contaminated tallow late in the week of Sept. 21, and tallow and feed already produced by the three feed manufacturers was detained for testing.

When PCB levels were found, the feed was pulled back from feed stores; some feed was tracked down to some 220 farms.

The regular testing program was stepped up in successive weeks and is ongoing now. The first spot checks were made from supplies already in supermarkets, and then escalated into frozen stocks.

Poultry was then tested on slaughterhouse killing floors, and testers turned their attention to live flocks.

"There is the strong hope that we've caught the peak of this thing and that there was no serious contamination of any food supplies in B.C.," Houghton said.

That was more than a week ago. This week, the department ordered the destruction of 1,300 pheasant carcasses in Aldergrove.

Will that signal a rash of PCB contamination incidents? Only time will tell.

So far only the pheasants have been deemed a hazard; chickens are still considered safe, federal authorities report. But that certainly doesn't mean British Columbians are home free.

Consider the PBB disaster in Michigan. The report of the affair is laced with official assurances that there was no problem, and that PBB levels weren't dangerous.

The tragedy began in May, 1973, in St. Louis, Mich., (ironically, PCBs are produced in St. Louis, Mo.) when workers at the Michigan Chemical Corporation ran out of the 50-pound bags imprinted "Firemaster" in bright red ink normally used to package PBB fire retardant.

Pending the arrival of more bags, the deadly chemical was put into plain brown bags with the trade name stencilled on them.

Nutrimaster — a magnesium oxide supplement for sweetening acidic dairy feed rations, was also packed into the same plain brown bags.

Despite the rule that the two substances were to be made and stored in separate buildings several hundred yards apart, the Firemaster and Nutrimaster were somehow mixed up, triggering what is now being called "the worst man-made agricultural disaster in U.S. history."

Several thousand pounds of the chemical were ultimately sent to the Farm Bureau Services, a co-operative feed mill in Battle Creek, Mich., where, over the next year, it was mixed in with feed that was sold statewide.

Hogs, cows, chickens, pets and wildlife ate the feed and died. Those that survived became a part of the food chain, despite the symptoms they began exhibiting — elephantlike skin, hair loss, hooves that curled upward, diseases that were suddenly untreatable, and reproduction problems such as stillbirths and spontaneous abortions.

Farm familes that ate their own produce began suffering several disorders — fatigue, arthritis, skin rashes, deformed nails, scaly, leathery skin, loss of physical and mental capacity (memory and judgement problems), diminished libidos, appetite loss, weight and hair loss and stomach pains.

Many were found to have PBB levels in their bodies higher than those found in animals that were ordered destroyed.

In the ensuing battle between affected farmers, the feed company, the Michigan Department of Agriculture and others embroiled in the dispute, there were several official claims that the feed was safe and levels of PBB found in animals were acceptable.

In time, it was learned that the feed was totally unsafe and the lives of 40 million people were endangered by PBB, a potent, cancer-causing substance.

In April, 1974, his herd was quarantined and 800 cows were later destroyed.

Some of his cows showed PBB levels as high as 2,480 parts per million in their body fat and 900 ppm in their milk fat. Less than a year later, the state set an allowable limit of 0.3 ppm for meat and milk fat, and 0.05 ppm for eggs and feed.

In July, 1974, veterinarian Alpha Clarke took body fat samples from 1,000 cows in his area, where farmers had been assured tainted feed had not been distributed.

The Michigan Department of Agriculture told Clarke there were no serious levels of PBB in the cows.

Suspicious, he took samples from 40 of the cows and sent them to the independent WARF Institute in Madison, Wisc. The Institute recorded PBB levels 10 times higher than those reported by the state agriculture department.

The foregoing is only a sampling of incidents that make up the PBB horror story. Officials there first denied the existence of the PBB problem, then downplayed the seriousness of the situation.

Even after the disaster came into public focus, it was thought the contamination had been limited to Michigan's nine million residents.

Subsequent testing turned up PBB in 13 other states. At the height of the PBB contamination, 35 million tourists visited Michigan and sampled Michigan produce.

And such products as chicken soup, baby food and livestock feed produced in the state have been distributed far beyond its borders, probably worldwide.

The state of Michigan has a $120 million suit against Michigan Chemicals and Farm Bureau Services for costs incurred because of the PBB-tainted feed.

But did all the contamination result from the one spill? State inspectors have found five highly contaminated farms that never bought any Farm Bureau Services feed.

The PBB issue in Michigan will continue for years. While it is unlikely PCB incidents in B.C. will ever achieve the same disastrous dimensions, the Michigan lesson should not be forgotten.

A history of PCBs in B.C. shows they're nothing new

PCB contamination in B.C. is nothing new. This is a brief history of some of the several cases that have come to light in the province.

The total amount of PCB in the province — in transformers, capacitors and other electrical heat transfer devices used by B.C. Hydro and a host of industrial and commercial companies — will probably never be fully known.

The record:

1972 — A Finnish contractor working for B.C. Hydro buries a number of discarded PCB capacitors at the McLeese Lake station in the Williams Lake area.

Each stainless steel container is 30 inches tall by 18 inches wide and contains four quarts of PCB. The McLeese station uses 12,000 capacitors at one time. Other faulty capacitors are buried at other stations, but they will lie undiscovered for more than three years.

November, 1976 — PCB is discovered in Sheridan Creek in the vicinity of McLeese Lake by federal environmental protection service testers.

Residents begin to link PCB and a rash of livestock deaths at a farm within 300 yards of the station. The problem includes chicks born deformed, and the deaths of a cow, two calves and 85 per cent of newboard chicks, ducklings and goslings.

Hydro ultimately digs up 68 capacitors at McLeese Lake, and admits the possibility that the Finnish contractor who built the station may have buried 200 to 300 canisters around the site.

December, 1976 — PCB is found in Fraser River fish. The substance, says an expert, can't be destroyed, except by incineration at 2,500 degrees Farenheit.

"As you wear your tires down, you're dumping PCB into the environment," he says.

In the same month, the Monsanto Company of St. Louis, Mo., is ordered by the U.S. government to stop producing PCB by Jan. 1, 1979.

Some 120 gallons is contained on the roof of the mill, but the remainder flows through the sewage system into Porpoise Harbor, some four miles south of the city.

Dr. Phil Long, then director of the Cariboo Health Unit, claims that one quart of PCB is enough to wipe out an entire lake — "a cubic mile of water."

February, 1977 — A biologist terms the Porpoise Bay spill a major disaster, but two days later then Environment Minister Jim Nielsen claims the contamination was limited to within a 15-foot radius of the sewer outfall.

April, 1977 — CanCel pleads not guilty to 16 separate charges of pollution related to PCB spills alleged to have taken place between July, 1976, and March, 1977.

August, 1977 — A federal government biologist testifies at the CanCel trial that Porpoise Harbor has the highest PCB contamination anywhere in the world, with test readings between 50,000 and 100,000 parts per million. At the time, anything above 1,000 ppm is considered extreme. The trial will continue for several months.

November, 1977 — An environmental group's claim that 25 gallons of PCB have leaked from a transformer onto the tidal flats of a bird sanctuary at Stewart, B.C., is confirmed by the RCMP.

Someone pulled the top off the transformer and tipped it over. Kitty litter is used in an effort to clear away the syrupy PCB. Federal environment officials manage to contain the spill in a pocket of soft gravel 70 feet from Portland Canal.

March, 1978 — CanCel is fined $24,500 on pollution charges. The judge says he has taken into consideration the $200,000 the company has spent to clean up the spilled 60 gallons of PCB.

October, 1978 — Operators of Richmond Landfill Ltd. say environmental officials have refused the company's offer to move six PCB-filled transformers from a Richmond dump. Company president Gordon Gilly claims B.C. Hydro dumped the transformers on the site.

November, 1978 — The federal environment department announces that PCBs will be prohibited in all new products effective Jan. 1, 1979. New restrictions will prohibit the import, manufacture, processing or sale of PCBs in all areas.

Here's what all those initials mean

With PCB and PBB fast becoming household initials, the Times asked Martin Hocking, an associate professor in the University of Victoria chemistry department, to explain what they stand for, what the compounds are, why they were created, and how dangerous they are.

PCB was developed years ago as a softener for PVC (polyvinyl chloride) cable insulation. The PVC was durable and not harmed by exposure to the elements. But it was brittle and difficult to work with, a problem overcome with the addition of PCB.

PCB turned out to be an ideal coolant for transformers but it's also used in television sets, refrigerators, fluorescent light fixtures, carbon paper, printing inks and a host of plastic products.

But the very qualities that made it desirable in the first place are now seen in a different light.

"They wanted something very stable," says Hocking.

PCB was very stable, it wasn't oxidized by air, and it cost little.

But the fact PCBs and PBBs don't break down is why they're causing problems in the environment.

PBB was developed as a fire retardant material and its toxicity is far greater than PCB.

"But PCB is still pretty toxic stuff," Hocking says.

Discovering information about the toxic effects of PBBs was difficult, but one U.S. report on it bears repeating.

In 1971, DuPont Chemical Co. was thinking of using PBB in a line of fire resistant clothing.

Their researchers vetoed the idea when they found the chemical causes enlarged livers at low chronic doses, it concentrates and remains in body fat — it is similar to DDT in its persistence in remaining in fatty tissue — and it has a low safety factor when swallowed, inhaled or absorbed through the skin.

The chemical company that marketed PBB fire retardant in Michigan had advertised the product as safe.

"The companies are now going to alternatives," Hocking said, "primarily because of the toxic risk. And the original advantages of PCBs have become disadvantages."

Dr. James Allen of the University of Wisconsin said of his research: "We found that difficulty in conception and early abortion are definitely related to PCBs."

Step at a time balcony rhyme

As another month begins, many life-long gardeners will find themselves with a balcony space where in time they hope to grow plants. No longer will they be tied to the care of a full-sized garden which they had latterly been saying was becoming too much work.

A suggestion may be useful. Unless you are already familiar with the direction of its winds and amount of sun reaching your balcony, plant only a token container or two this first week.

Winds will differ in winter to those of summer, and so will the amount of sunshine reaching your balcony floor and walls. But much information will be gleaned from a few months occupancy.

Narcissus bulbs in one container, tulips in another will give instant interest and splendid results in spring. Use only one variety of each for a fine effect, unless you have always liked mixed bulb effects in your previous gardens. Tulips are hardier than narcissi. (Remember outdoor beds of tulips in Toronto and Ottawa? But narcissi were for pots indoors and in greenhouses.)

To give a little protection from hard frost which may be our lot this winter keep a packing carton or two of suitable size and shape for covering the balcony planters.

Cardboard is warm in itself especially if corrugated. For extra warmth it may be given a complete lining of newspaper or brown paper in several thicknesses. This should extend beneath the planter or container as well as on all other sides.

Of the two, brown paper (thick brown shopping bags) is preferred as it lacks the ink chemicals of newsprint.

Your initial choice for beginning the new adventure of balcony gardening may be the acquiring of a half dozen food plants to produce something edible and fresh to add to store bought vegetables. This will be a wise decision whether or not you have been accustomed to a year round supply from previous gardens.

Plants which are self-renewing as they are used will be a good choice for a start. In one 2-by-1-foot planter, or an 18-inch-square (or round) tub, a half-dozen herb-style plants will supply pickings all winter even with a minimum of sunshine and the little bit of warmth usually found on a balcony near its walls.

Unless you have a better choice, think of chives, chervil, parsley, thyme, winter savory. With a light hand in gathering, one of these should have pieces ready for use each day.

As time passes, a decision will be reached as to whether you will really enjoy the freedom from gardening or whether the urge is strong enough to get the balcony space developed as a "garden."

If the balcony idea wins, begin to plan as you would in starting a conventional garden. But keep in mind that all soil and its components will have to come by hand to the balcony by way of the elevator.

There have been balcony gardens created as "floor gardens" using strips of artificial green grass with tubs and planters of simple design set into the "turf". These are effective and fairly easy to keep up. Beneath the "turf," heavy plastic sheeting would be needed as protection for the flooring, but look around to see if a waterproof backing has more recently been used for this turf.

In either case, waterproof or not, watering of the plants will need to be studied. The tubs and planters of simple design are set into the "turf" for a pleasing effect as in an outdoor patio. Drying of the plants will be considerably less than in planters dotted around a balcony, for sprinkling the "grass" gives a little extra humidity.

Whatever you have in mind, do a little each season. It will be a lot more fun if success is reached at each step.

New-teacher proposal trimmed

By AB KENT

An administration request for 22 new teachers in the fall term next year was chopped by dollar-conscious trustees considering School District 61 budget proposals Tuesday.

Adding instruction staff is a main plank of the 1980 provisional budget being debated this week.

The increase is needed, says the administration, to reduce class sizes and the pupil-teacher ratio and to improve the quality of instruction, especially in English and social studies.

The Greater Victoria Teachers Association concurs.

Twelve secondary and 10 elementary teachers were proposed at a cost of $226,696 for the September-December term, and together with a proposed 19 additional teacher-librarians at a cost of $196,195, would have brought the pupil-teacher ratio down to 17.83, almost equal to the provincial average 17.81.

But trustees would not go for 19 teacher-librarians and reduced the number to nine at a cost of $92,435.

Trustee John Young said the remainder could be considered for inclusion next year.

He said the district needs at least the provincial average in pupil-teacher ratio and said he did not think taxpayers want the schools to operate at only an average level or less.

"Our intermediate classes in the district are a disgrace as far as I'm concerned," said chairman Carol Pickup.

Earlier, trustees were told a ratio of 15-1 might be acceptable.

"How do we know when we get there? Does someone tap me on the shoulder and say, 'We're there'?" ex-chairman Susan Brice asked.

She said the impact of adding teachers over the past eight or nine years should start being felt and recalled that last year it was hoped 1979 might be the year.

Win Mott said the district ought to re-deploy its resources and sacrifice something else if there is so much need for English and social studies improvement.

Glynn Williams said the board is trying to take "quantum leaps" instead of bringing in change over a period of years and said he agreed that teaching resources could be deployed more effectively.

Peter Yorke said additions to the budget are incredible.

"I wonder who's going to have to pay in the end," he said, adding the classroom impact of additional teachers would not be dramatic but the impact on taxpayers would be.

Martin Levin said he sympathizes with teachers and the administration but wondered whether the quality of education would really be improved.

"It is not clear to me that if we approve this increase in teachers it will improve the quality of written expression," he said.

Regarding teacher-librarians, Mark Fisher said the reduced number approved by trustees does not solve the problem of getting more librarians into the schools.

Some schools will use the credits to obtain another full-time teacher instead of one divided between library and classroom, he said, suggesting what is needed is a librarian policy for all schools.

Pickup said it is one move toward the goal of better librarianship as set out in the Cameron report tabled last year. She had faith, she said, in the administration seeing that additional staff is used to the greatest benefit of children.

An amendment to add library clerk-typists at a cost of $30,864 was defeated as was a proposed $43,595 expenditure for community school co-ordinators in the September-December term next year.

Hot car torched

A stolen car valued at $6,000 was destroyed by an arson fire early today in Burnside.

Victoria deputy fire chief Fred Severson said it was the latest in a series of four or five car fires of a suspicious nature in the last two weeks.

In today's fire, a 1978 Volvo owned by William R. Miller, of Burnaby, was stolen from the Empress Hotel and abandoned at Washington and Cecelia, where it was set alight shortly before 5 a.m.

Pleas delay sentencing

A county court judge said Tuesday impressive and persuasive submissions by two defence lawyers caused him to adjourn sentencing of two 26-year-old men until Friday.

Bruce John Anderson and Bruce William Shinnan pleaded guilty earlier to a joint offence of auto theft in Saanich on March 9, 1978. Both also pleaded guilty to two separate counts of possession of stolen car parts.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart said the submissions by lawyers Patrick Sweeney, for Shinnan, and Richard Stewart, for Anderson, changed the sentencing from an apparently simple matter to something more complicated.

It seemed to him the question was whether the evidence of rehabilitation since the arrest established a sincere and honest rehabilitation and it was difficult to decide.

The question was also whether probation and a suspended sentence was justified or was a jail term of some substance warranted.

"I intend to very carefully consider the very impressive pleas made for these men and some of the evidence I have heard from those who support them," he said, adding that he did not want to raise hopes between now and Friday.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said the stolen car, a 1966 Mustang fastback worth $3,000, was found stripped-down in a deserted area on Durrance Road. All kinds of parts and the contents were missing, although court was later told all have been recovered.

Smith said a wiretap of both men's homes resulted in a search and the finding of parts identified as coming from the stolen Mustang, another stolen car and other sources including a garage theft.

Shinnan has a criminal record from 1970 to 1973 including theft, auto theft, breaking and entering and theft, taking an auto without the owner's consent and possession of stolen property.

Anderson has a criminal record extending to this year including breaking and entering and theft, taking an auto without the owner's consent, theft, and possession of stolen property.

Sweeney told the court that Shinnan was married last month to the woman he has lived with for four years. He supports her and her child by a previous marriage. He has worked steadily in a mill for 4½ years.

If he was jailed, he will lose his job and his family will lose his support, he said.

Sweeney said Shinnan has changed his lifestyle and submitted letters of reference, including one from the father of the child saying Shinnan is a better father than him.

He asked Judge Stewart to consider a suspended sentence and probation. If a fine was ordered, he asked that it be payable at $50 a month. If jail was ruled necessary, he asked that it be for less than 90 days so it can be served on weekends to preserve his job.

Anderson's lawyer Richard Stewart said the presentence report commented that his client did not appear to have a sense of remorse but that was simply not the case.

While his work history was sporadic, he now had a full-time job as a mechanic. His employer testified on his behalf, saying he was a good worker whose job will be continued.

His mother-in-law also testified for him. She said she strongly disapproved of him some years ago when he started going out with her daughter, saying he was irresponsible and the kind of person one wouldn't want one's daughter to meet.

But he had changed during the years, has grown up and accepted responsibility, spends a lot of time at home and has changed past friends.

Judge Stewart was asked to first consider Anderson's rehabilitation. Jail would be counter-productive and the public interest was best served by his rehabilitation.

Islanders could feel power pinch this winter

"Growth on Vancouver Island has almost exceeded the capacity of the Island's generating facilities and the undersea cables feeding the Island from the mainland," says the latest issue of Service Digest, which went out with Hydro bills to all B.C. residents this month.

Newspaper ads are also being prepared to get the same conservation message across to British Columbians, with special information for the Island.

"Last winter we were lucky. We got through the winter with very little margin," said Hydro spokesman John Sexton.

"This year depending on how cold the winter is, it could give us cause for concern."

"We just squeaked by last winter," said Hydro's V.I. manager Gordon Roper.

Roper said about 200 megawatts have been added, but about 60 have already been taken up by increased demand and the 200 megawatts have to last until 1983. No more extra capacity will be added until then.

The winter of 1982 will be the crucial test. That is the last year before the new million-volt transmission lines over Georgia Strait are connected to the Island power grid and solve our long-term power problems.

The Digest says the peak load period between 5 and 7 p.m. sees the maximum demand for power.

"One day the demand could be too great, exceeding the capacity of the system."

Roper said the effective result of this would be brownouts over parts of the Island as Hydro is forced to "shed load."

The Island has two thermal plants in reserve for emergencies, the Keogh plant on the northern end of the Island and the Georgia plant near Chemainus, but they run on expensive diesel fuel and can't be operated for long periods, he added.

The present margin of power also assumes no failures or breakdowns in existing power plants and transmission lines. There is always a possibility of that happening, said Roper.

"While it is important for all customers to conserve electricity, it is particularly important for V.I. residents to help reduce power demand during peak load periods," says the Digest.

"V.I. customers can do their part by delaying certain activities until later in the evening — or until off-peak periods the next day."

Hydro suggests five major ways of saving power: avoid washing or ironing clothes, taking baths or showers and running a dishwasher or clothes dryer between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. each evening.

Other ways of saving smaller amounts of electricity are also suggested. Turn off the television or the lights if they're not being used. If you have a self-cleaning oven, postpone the cleaning job until after 7 p.m.

Roper also suggested anyone who lives in a house that is electrically heated should insulate thoroughly, taking advantage of Hydro's loans program and — if the house was built before 1961 — the federal CHIP insulation grants.

Bennett girds up for tough convention

Premier Bill Bennett is meeting in Vancouver today with a restless caucus in what observers feel is a bid to emphasize his leadership and ensure that the dirty tricks affair does not dominate the Social Credit convention which kicks off Thursday.

While Bennett wants to try to keep the ever-widening dirty tricks scandal from overshadowing the three-day annual meeting, his efforts may be in vain.

The premier says he will present a resolution to the convention "instructing the executive to develop an ethics committee on standards to be brought back to the convention in 1980 for approval."

But the question remains: Will this be enough to stifle the growing scandal and quieten the increasing demand within and outside the party that everyone responsible be identified and held accountable?

In past years, the caucus has met after the three-day convention to discuss any resolutions passed and make plans.

But sources say the premier wants to remind the caucus who is boss and settle any question of his leadership before it spills onto the convention floor.

The convention will be a soul-searching session and some insiders say it may ultimately determine the party's future as a viable, political force in B.C.

Some 1,500 Socreds who once prided themselves on their party's quiet efficiency and its businesslike organization and strategy, find themselves members of an organization which appears to be in disarray.

They face three days of earnest debate — a debate which they hope will create a new, squeaky-clean image to present to the voters of B.C.

The party has been rocked in recent weeks by the dirty tricks affair — an ongoing scandal involving forged letters-to-the-editor which may yet end up in the courts.

His leadership — or his lack of it in delegating responsibility to root out why lettergate occurred and who was responsible — will be called into question at the convention.

Bennett must also deal with a caucus which is wondering when a cabinet shuffle, now some five months overdue, will take place.

The caucus must also deal with the case of Ellen MacKay, a researcher involved with former chief researcher Jack Kelly, in the dirty tricks campaign.

Kelly quit and MacKay's status is up in the air. Both have retained a lawyer and Kelly at least has said he is considering legal action against the party for wrongful dismissal.

Party critics claim that Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy and other cabinet ministers did little or nothing to resolve the scandal while the premier was away.

And this has fueled criticism that Bennett is attempting to run the party as a one-man show.

Bennett was initially accused of trying to seize complete control of the party when he appointed Hugh Harris, his friend and personal campaign manager, as party executive director.

John Gilchrist, the party provincial director ousted in the move, charged that the party was being turned into a branch plant of the premier's office, but later withdrew the remark.

The convention also will offer party faithful their first chance to question the government about the near-disastrous May 10 provincial election. See CONVENTION page 16

Joe Who stew

It arrived on Parliament Hill on the label of a large model of a can of Clark beans, the latest annual Halloween prank by Carleton University architecture students.

"Joe's own recipe for Campaign Stew," read the label.

"Crack open Petro-Can and separate profit from deficit. Discard profit. Add McTeer and Davis and stir vigorously. Mix in sauteed embassy and bring to a boil. Skim off 60,000 civil servants. Strain out Crown corporations and simmer at inflation rate of 16 per cent.

"Serves 9-10 Provinces and 2 Territories."

The large can, 2½ metres high and two metres in diameter, was topped by red and orange balloons resembling the beans in pork and beans.

$18M a day for Alta. oil?

B.C. would have to pay Alberta $18 million a day for crude oil if the oil-producing province unilaterally hiked prices to world levels, according to B.C. Energy Minister James Hewitt.

Negotiations between Alberta and the federal government for a new oil-pricing system have bogged down, and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed warned this week that he would be prepared to raise prices unilaterally and refuse to sell Alberta oil for less.

Provinces unwilling to pay the new prices could "shop elsewhere," he said.

(The Economic Council of Canada gave its stamp of approval today to increasing domestic oil by $4 a barrel a year for at least the next five years.)

(The increase was one of 12 major recommendations in the council's 1979 annual review entitled Two Cheers for the Eighties. See page 28 for ECC report).

Hewitt said Tuesday the threat by Lougheed was the result of frustration at being unable to obtain a federal price agreement.

"This could cost other oil-consuming provinces a great deal of money in the near future," he said.

Ministry economist Ted France said an increase to world-level oil prices by Alberta would mean an increase of $10 a barrel, bringing B.C.'s oil costs close to $18 million a day, or $6.57 billion a year.

"B.C. buys about 120,000 barrels of oil a day from Alberta at $13.75 a barrel," France said. "Shipping and administrative costs bring this up to around $14.25 by the time it reaches the province."

He said Alberta oil costs the province about $650 million a year and the kind of increase threatened by Lougheed would take "a sizeable bite" out of provincial revenues.

"At one point, B.C. oil fields were producing 70,000 barrels of oil a day, but production is down to 40,000 barrels a day and dropping as the supply nears depletion," France said.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Joe Clark Tuesday assured the Commons the federal government will have the last word on domestic oil prices, but Lougheed warned against that last word ignoring input from Alberta.

Lougheed told the legislature his earlier statement that Alberta might have to unilaterally set the price of domestic oil was meant as a firm indication his province won't accept the federal government arriving at a price on its own.

Clark said he still believes a federal-provincial agreement will be reached.

Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau asked Clark in the Commons whether he would ensure that Western oil will be available to all Canadians in light of Lougheed's statement.

Clark said the federal government has powers under the constitution to enforce an agreement and can also use sections of the Petroleum Administration Act, a bill passed in 1975.

But the prime minister said he doubts the federal government will have to impose a settlement under its special constitutional powers.

Housewives may get cash

BERN (Reuter) — Women in Switzerland would get the right to cash payments from their husbands for staying at home as housewives under a proposed law announced by the government on Tuesday.

The money would be in addition to housekeeping expenses and would have to be the same as the husband has for his own pleasures, said a spokesman for the ministry of justice and police.

A man who stayed at home would be able to claim similar payments under the proposed law, which is to go before parliament next year.

The planned revisions to Swiss matrimonial law, which has been in effect since 1912 and favors men, would allow a woman for the first time to take a job without her husband's permission.

Current law names the husband as the head of he household, gives him the power to decide where the couple lives and the right to refuse to allow his wife to sign contracts for anything beyond daily housekeeping needs, the spokesman said.

Under the revised law, couples would decide together where they live. Both partners would have equal rights to sign contracts.

Housekeeping would become a joint reponsibility and the man or woman who stayed at home to do it would have "the right to an equitable amount of money which he or she can dispose of freely."

Election call shocks Grits

OTTAWA (CP) — Some Liberal MPs reacted with shock and disbelief today when told that Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau has had a change of heart and now is ready to defeat the minority Progressive Conservative government and face the nation in another election.

"When did he say that?" former finance minister Jean Chretien asked in a voice that seemed marked with incredulity.

Hal Herbert, MP for the Montreal area riding of Vaudreuil, said the country is not ready for an election.

"I'm worried about going too fast," Herbert told reporters on entering the weekly meeting of Liberal MPs.

Another top Liberal, who asked to remain anonymous, and a spokesman for Prime Minister Clark both said a survey of Liberal MPs would likely show most are oppposed to a defeat of the minority government so soon after the May 22 election.

Addressing a Liberal association meeting Tuesday, Trudeau said his party will try to defeat the minority government the first chance it gets.

"Let's throw the government out as soon as we can and get back in again," Trudeau told 300 party supporters.

The statement indicated a shift in attitude by the former prime minister. Until then, he had been saying all opposition parties should give the Tories a chance to govern.

"Any time, we're ready," said Senator Alastair Graham, Liberal party president. "We're organizing and have been since May 22."

Senator Graham noted that the latest Gallup poll showed the Liberals with 41 per cent of the decided vote and the Conservatives with 37 per cent.

Wild winds whip snow as Colorado clobbered

Times News Services

Savage winds piled 12-foot snowdrifts on the high-country roads of eastern Colorado today, leaving hundreds of people huddled in snow-mired trucks and buses, awaiting rescue by emergency teams on snowplows.

The massive storm system — which buried a broad area from Nebraska to Colorado in deep snow and sent tornadoes and deadly winds raging to the south of the snow — left a path of personal tragedy as at least eight people were killed and two were reported missing.

It was a cruel prelude to winter through portions of the central and southern plains of the United States.

In addition to the dead and stranded, the storm toll included knocked-out power lines.

Blizzard warnings were in effect early today across western Kansas and west-central Nebraska, and travellers advisories were posted for the Texas Panhandle, northeastern New Mexico and the mountains and foothills of Colorado, the National Weather Service said.

Two persons were killed Tuesday when a freak tornado spawned by the storm smashed a mobil home in a rural community near Ardmore, Okla.

Six other persons died in traffic accidents, including a man and woman struck by a car when they stopped to help a vehicle stalled in a snow-filled ditch in the Texas Panhandle.

A Continental Trailways bus en route from Amarillo, Tex., to Denver was stranded in southeastern Colorado, and plows trying to reach it drove against winds of 150 kilometres an hour .

$1 billion coal pact

A Taiwan government agency has tentatively agreed to buy coal from a B.C. company in a $1-billion, 25-year deal which will create an $80-million mine near Prince George and 600 jobs in central B.C.

The agreement between Norco Resources Ltd. and Taiwan Power Co. was signed earlier this month as Premier Bill Bennett toured the Far East looking for markets for B.C.'s natural resources.

Today's announcement of the deal, came as Economic Development Minister Don Phillips prepares to lead a trade delegation to the People's Republic of China.

Mexico DC-10 crash kills 63

MEXICO CITY (CP) — A Western Airlines DC-10 jetliner inbound from Los Angeles with at least 88 persons aboard crashed in fog on a closed-for-repairs runway at the Mexico City airport today, killing at least 63 persons, officials said.

The U.S. consul said 19 survivors, all injured, were taken to three hospitals. One report said a Canadian identified only as D.J., 37, was among the survivors. The fate of the others aboard the plane was not immediately nown. Nor was it known how many U.S. citizens were aboard. Most of the passengers were believed Mexicans.

A Mexican aviation official said the plane touched down at Benito Juarez International Airport on a runway that was closed for repairs, struck a parked truck and killed its driver, and plowed into two buildings.

In New York, experts said it was too soon to tell whether the crash of the DC-10 would cause additional problems for the manufacturer of the aircraft, McDonnell Douglas Corp. The company has been in the process of recovering from a 37-day grounding of its DC-10s after an American Airlines plane crashed last May 25 at Chicago's O'Hare Airport, killing 273 persons, the worst aviation disaster in North American history.

Witnesses said the DC-10's right wing hit one airport building and then the plane crashed against a new building under construction, part of which is used by the Mexican post office, and the roof caved in.

An airport control tower employee said he understood the plane's captain, Charles Gilbert, survived.

In Los Angeles, the airline said the plane had 88 persons aboard, 77 passengers and 11 crew members. It said earlier reports of two more aboard stemmed from the fact that two flight attendants were listed both as passengers and as crew members.

Luis Pasquel, vice-president for Western in Mexico, said the plane was approaching the airport over Lake Texcoco when it crashed within airport boundaries.

The crash occurred at 5:40 a.m. local time. Airport employees said there was "fairly heavy fog" at the time.

Mexico city airport is considered by pilots "a difficult" airport to approach because of nearby mountains and occasional poor visibility. It is surrounded by residential areas.

Convention will question leadership

The campaign, under Bennett's direction, saw the NDP capture 47 per cent of the popular vote and cut Social Credit's majority of 35 of 55 seats to 31 of 57.

Controversial cabinet decisions to spring farmland from the Agricultural Land Reserve for development, sloppy drafting of legislation, the government's failure to deliver a promised energy policy and a proposal to replace the regional district system of local government with county councils are also expected to come under fire.

The latest twist in the dirty tricks affair involves the forgery of the name of a prominent NDP supporter on a Social Credit membership form in the Yale-Lillooet riding.

NDPer J. K. Brown Sr. says news of his alleged switch to Social Credit was spread throughout the constituency in an apparent attempt to discredit the NDP just before the provincial election.

He said he considered the matter a bad joke, but took the matter to the RCMP after the dirty tricks disclosures and agreed to press charges if the person who committed the forgery is found.

Chrysler loses $460.6M

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said Tuesday it lost $460.6 million in the third quarter — a loss for the single quarter that was larger than than any reported by a U.S. company in an entire year.

The huge deficit, which had been expected among industry observers, may help the company's campaign for financial help from the federal government.

The third-quarter loss means that the No. 3 automaker has lost $721.5 million so far this year — $53.8 million for the first quarter and $207.1 million for the second.

Chrysler's latest quarterly loss amounts to $7.15 a share of common stock, and $11.41 for the year with one quarter still remaining.

Blue chip issues gave up some of Tuesday's sharp gains in a mixed stock-market session today.

Analysts viewed Tuesday's upsurge as primarily a technical rally rather than a response to any particular positive news.

They noted that investors were still faced with prospects of more increases in world oil prices and record-high interest rates.

London

The Financial Times index was down 1.1 to 437.4.
